THURSDAY, July 4, 1912

The Kit Carson Wild West show came to Heppner on Monday and gave two performances, afternoon and evening. It was heralded as one of the biggest performances going but actually Heppner people can witness just about as good "wild west" stunts most any day as we were given. At any rate this part of the performance was nothing to excite people of this section. The show carries some good performers on the trapeze and slack wire, and has a good band. It also had with it a full quota of fakirs, even to the fellow who caught the suckers by working the old, familiar shell game. This game was worsed openly and permitted to be done, because of the unsophisticated nature of the officials standing about and watching the performance. The officials are not to blame, of course, for allowing men, and young boys also, to be floored, as they did not understand the nature of the game and regarded it evidently as a little innocent pastime. However, there is a law against such games, and we are of the opinion that should any one of our own citizens attempt to work such a steal-in our midst he would be run in promptly, as he should be, and there is no reason for allowing a gang of outsiders to violate the law with impunity.
