An attachment for hoe drills as illustrated here has two very valuable and important features which every progressive farmer will appreciate. It is made to fit any hoe, is easily adjusted and answers the double purpose of regulating the depth of sowing and at the same time presses the soil firmly around the grain thus insuring immediate germination. Hard To Reconcile.

How is the Bull Moose party going to reconcile its cardinal platform plank "Thou shalt not steal" with its avowed intention to choose in every state where it can be done, so-called republican electors who are pledged to cast their vote in the electoral college for Colonel Roosevelt running on a third party ticket?

Is it strictly ethical for a party that is basing its appeal to the people on the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal" to profit by the votes of men who are masquerading under the colors and name of the party that it has expressly condemned and cast off?

Is it in accord with the spirit of the commandment "Thou shalt not steal" to stack the deck against an opponent? For if the Bull Moose party succeeds in blinding republican electors to cast their ballots in the electoral college for a man who is not the choice of the republican party, the republican voter will be playing against a stacked deck. He will be bucking a surething game. He will be confronted with the alternative of voting for an elector who is pledged not to carry out his will, or of not voting at all. He will thus lose his vote if he does, and will lose it if he does not.

The elector is bound by an unwritten pledge to cast his electoral ballot for the candidate nominated by his party. Is he getting in the spirit of the commandment "Thou shalt not steal" when he breaks that pledge? A few years ago there was an effort here in Oregon to induce state legislators to break their Statement One pledge, which is essentially similar to the elector's pledge. Was that considered an ethical procedure? Or was it not condemned with a violence that was measured only by the limits of the condemnatory vocabulary?

Can it be that the plank "Thou shalt not steal" is but a fly-atcher set out to gather in votes.—Eugene Register.

The Republican National Committee will divide the country into four parts, for the forthcoming campaign. The Pacific Coast headquarters will be in Portland, Ralph E. Williams having charge. He is a well known Oregon organizer. Considerable of the honor that followed the close of the Chicago convention, is wearing out and during the next few months, it is believed that the campaign will settle down to a straight out issue as between the Republican and Democratic candidates. Should a third candidate enter the field, it is not believed that he will cut much of a figure and the support that he gets will be drawn about evenly from each state.

Charles D. Hillis, until recently secretary to President Taft, has been chosen national chairman. At this time, Republicans believe they have a chance to carry four Southern states namely Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri.

Mr. H. H. Cohen, the serial crop statistician and commercial editor of the Oregon Journal was in Condon this week and made us a pleasant call. He has been all over these three counties writing up crop conditions for his publication. Mr. Cohen's estimate of Gilliam county's grain exports this fall is 4,000,000 bushels and he has not over estimated, as we are going to have an enormous crop. We insured some wheat this week that will make all of 40 bushels to the acre and perhaps more. Weather conditions are ideal, and numbers of harvest hands are coming in every evening. Let them come, there will be jobs for all and to spare. In another couple of weeks or ten days harvest will be general all over the county and no man need be idle that really wants to work.—Condon Times.

We rejoice with our Gilliam County neighbors over this splendid crop showing. They are entitled to it. Morrow county is not behind either and will deliver the greatest crop of wheat in its history. All we need is a few years of what these counties are to turn off this season.

Now is the proper time to be making selection of grains for the Fall fair and care should be exercised in preparing the grains in bundles of proper dimensions. It will pay to take a little time for this and get grains with uniform heads and length of straw. It should be made up in bundles measuring about five inches around and carefully tied and labeled. All samples should be delivered to Judge C. C. Patterson, secretary of the Booster Club and he will care for them until the time for their shipment to the fairs. All interested parties can receive further information by calling on or addressing the Secretary at Heppner. Don't pass this up for Morrow county must have a proper showing at the fairs and land shows. There is not a better way to advertise our resources. There is a $5000 prize to be carried off by some locality in the Northwest; Morrow county has always stood at the head in the grain contests at world's fairs and county fairs and it should stand a good chance to get this prize this season.

Heppner's streets are getting mighty dusty, especially Main street, and the nuisance is almost intolerable when the wind blows, even slightly. Just why the water-wagon has jumped the job, this paper does not know, unless it is a sort of a hold-up game. The city is not ready with their water yet for this purpose, and it is beginning to develop that they will not likely have enough water from the well recently dug. In the meantime a number of the business men are becoming very much interested in the proposition to oil the streets if it is found that the experiment can be carried out without too much expense. Many believe that the oiling of the streets will settle the dust problem, as well as kill off the weeds and grass that grows along the edges of the walks and becomes such a nuisance. At all events let something be done just as soon as possible for there is a slight possibility that the whole town may be buried alive with the dust if relief does not come.

FROM OVER THE STATE.

Community spirit was demonstrated to a remarkable extent by Oregon cities at the recent Elks convention in Portland. This was one of the most notable features of the gathering. The various places where Elks lodges exist made a surprisingly good showing in the big Elks parades that opened wide the eyes of Portland and of the visitors.

Those who have believed Oregon to be a state with one city changed their minds when they saw the parade and the long column of Elks from the four corners of the state sweep along Portland's streets. The active support of the state cities made the parade the big success it proved. The occasion further proved how much Portland relies on its friends in the interior in accomplishing any really big thing.

Tillman Renter, who makes grain grow on the semi-arid lands of Central Oregon where none grew before, does not want any one to overlook the forthcoming International Dry Farming Congress to be held at Lethbridge, Alberta, October 21-26. He is collecting exhibits of the products Oregon grows by dry-farming and, as usual, expects to win the leading prizes with products of Oregon dry farms. He has got into the habit of winning firsts for this state and expects to repeat his success this year.

Seaside, which grows prize dahlias, will have a dahlia show August 24 and 25. There is a movement on foot to make Seaside known as the "Dahlia City." It is claimed that nowhere else do the flowers reach such perfection.

Scouring Interior Oregon, picking out the best routes for a diving squadron of automobiles that will make the run to Lakeview late in August for the convention of the Central Oregon Development League, is a party of men interested, headed by C. O. Chapman, secretary of the Oregon Development League. This path-finding trip is occupying two weeks of strenuous road finding and map making.

Preliminary plans are going forward for making the Pacific Northwest Land Products Show, to be held in Portland November 18-23, the biggest and most successful land show ever given west of the Rocky Mountains. The management is getting in touch with commercial bodies and individual exhibitors of the territory to be represented and promises of liberal support are being received. Every district of the Northwest has an opportunity in this "dirt show" for valuable exploitation.

Oregon and Washington nurserymen at their meeting just held determined to wage a vigorous campaign for members during the coming year, so that when the American Association of Nurserymen meets in Portland next June, the visitors will be met by strong delegations from the two Northwest states. It is hoped to swell the enrollment of the Oregon-Washington Association of Nurserymen to 500 by next June.

BRIGNOLI IN A RAGE.

An Unappreciative Audience and a Sympathetic Servant.
Brignoli, the famous Italian tenor, always expected an encore, no matter where or what he sang, and if it was not forthcoming he was off in a rage instantly. In some small town he sang his favorite song, "Com e Gentil," a serenade from Donizetti's "Don Pasquale," with unusual care and walked off the stage perfectly satisfied, pausing at the wings to listen to the applause. To his utter amazement there was not a sound of approbation. He strode into the dressing room muttering that he would not respond to an encore; he would refuse to sing another song. Still the house remained silent. "No," he cried to those about him; "I refuse to sing again, I refuse to respond to the encore."
Barbagelata, who was more clever than the ordinary servant, humbly approached and said:
"Signor Brignoli, you sang that like an angel. The people could not appreciate it."
The old fellow nearly wept.
"Barbagelata," he exclaimed, "give me your hand, I did not know you were such a musician. Tagliaterra, I must introduce you to Barbagelata, my servant," turning to "Tag," who stood near by. "He is a great musician," went on Brignoli, still in a temper. "He appreciates my singing more than all those fools."

INSTANT DEATH.

It is Not So Quick but That the Mind Has Time to Act.
It is questionable if such a phenomenon as instant death is known to the scientist and investigator. Physicians and surgeons tell us that death by gunshot wound is the easiest mode of terminating life; yet, rapid as such a mode of taking off must necessarily be, the body has leisure to feel and time to reflect and on rare occasions even to act.

On the first attempt of one of the adherents of the Spanish monarch to assassinate William, prince of Orange, the ball passed through the bones of his face and brought him to the ground. In the instant which preceded stupefaction, however, he was able to frame the notion that the ceiling of a room had fallen in and crushed him.

Another question in this connection is that of probable pain. Although numerous instances could be cited in support of the view that the mind acts in cases of so called instant death, it by no means follows that the infliction of a fatal blow is attended by the least semblance of pain or a single pang of fear or regret. Unless death results immediately, however, the pain may be as varied as the nature of the injuries.

Winning a Fur Coat.
The artist Hans Canon once painted a Russian prince in a magnificent fur mantle which took his fancy so greatly that he endeavored to hit on a plan by which he might retain possession of it. On sending home the portrait he omitted to return the garment, and to the letter requesting him to do so he made no reply. One day when looking out of a window he saw the prince coming toward his house. Hastily slipping into the garb, Canon sat down in an armchair near the fire. The prince, who had come for his coat, started on seeing Canon grinning and trembling at the fireside. "What is the matter with you?" he asked. "Oh," grunted Canon, "I don't know what it is, but I feel so weak and wretched, and I cannot get warm. Two days ago my brother died of smallpox, and I am a bit nervous about myself." The artist kept the coat.

Diedrich Knickerbocker.
It may be that a Dutchman named Knickerbocker did live in the early history of New York, but if he did there are no records extant to prove it. The truth is, the name was created by Washington Irving, who applied it to all residents of New York in his time who happened to be descended from the early Dutch settlers. Irving used this quaint Dutch character in his "Knickerbocker History of New York" to burlesque the early days of the city. The volume purported to have been the work of Diedrich Knickerbocker and gave an amusing and satirical account of the early Dutch settlers. Records of the period tell us that the book bitterly offended their descendants, who never forgave Irving for his fling at them.—New York Times.

Boiled Oysters.
In "Social Life in the Reign of Queen Anne" Swift writes to Stella, "Lord Masham made me go home with him to eat boiled oysters," and then he obligingly adds the recipe: "Take oysters, wash them clean—that is, wash their shells clean; then put your oysters in an earthen pot with their hollow side down; then put this pot, covered, into a great kettle of water and let it boil. Your oysters are then boiled in their own liquor and do not mix with water."

"What is it, Tommy?"
"When you were a little boy and fellers called on your sister, did they ever give you a nickel to go out and play?"
