WHY NOT HEPPNER?

Heppner boasts of graded streets and crosswalks that are really crosswalks.

Under the present administration of city affairs more improvements have been made than were made in the previous twenty years. Once before in twenty years time the streets were graded and a general building of side walks and improvement of property was prevalent over the entire town.

This wave of improvement took place in 1902 and until the present administration the people have been contented to allow things to drift. A town is just what its people make it.
Hence, Heppner is just what its citizens want it to be. The building of the High school is a monument to the school board and to the people of Heppner. Good schools are a community's best asset and the more schools Heppner can secure the better the town will become.

But the town in general must be kept up to a standard. No man wants to settle down in a community where the dust from the streets rises in a cloud at every little gust of wind and then settles down into the home, carrying with it disease and filth. Nor does the country man care to come to the town to send his children to school where the children are forced to wade through mud to get to and from the school. These luxuries can be had in the country at the district schools.

Dirt streets and board sidewalks are not an inducement to those who are seeking culture and refinement to locate in a community. The novelist likes to write sentimental stories about the tumbled down villages and the noble rebels in the description thereof, but living in a tumbled down village is different from reading of one and the family man today wants convenience.

There are hundreds of towns in California, Oregon, Washington and other western states, no larger than Heppner which advertise paved street paved walks, complete sewerage and full course high schools, carrying manual training and domestic science.
These conveniences were brought about by bond issue. These towns are growing steadily. They have no more natural resources than Heppner has, but their people are not afraid to look into the future.

Property is not too high in Heppner, providing the city gives its people something in return, but at present property in Heppner or any other town that is content to stand still is no more valuable than it will produce.

Spur, Texas, was built from a bleak prairie to a town of 900 souls over night. Paved streets, paved sidewalks and sewerage did it. Spur sits in the heart of a big cattle ranch, but today it has 2,500 thrifty people. In the early spring of 1900 it was grazing land and part of the Spur Cattle Company's holdings. Taxes are higher in these communities but the people are getting something for their money.

Municipal improvements are just as valuable to the property owner as direct improvement of individual property.

(If what value is an alfalfa field in the heart of the Sahara desert?)

Hennepe has the rock and the sand to build good steets and do it cheaply.
Thousands of other towns are forced to pay freight on these materials.
Great cities are built on bonded indebtedness. Great corporations are made the same way and great commonwealths grow to perfection through the same channels. All over the United States the states and counties are building macadam highways.
These roads are better than any street in Heppner. The roads are built through the means of bond issues and the coming generation will help pay for the conveniences they are to enjoy.

A bond issue to pave Main, May, Chase and Gale streets should be the first thing Heppner people should consider. Then sewerage and the rest will follow.

When the Morrow county court house was built a certain stockman raised an awful fuss. When the new High school was built this same stockman and city property owner hollered again, but today he is in Portland offering Heppner and Morrow county property for sale. He talks louder of the court house and the school building than any other asset. He has found what the man seeking a location wants.

The fact that onions from Texas, potatoes from California and eggs and poultry from points outside of Oregon are being received in Portland in carload lots while the farmers in the immediate vicinity of the city, as well as those tributary to the railroads leading to this market, cannot find a market for their produce at any price has led the Portland Realty Board to actively take up the question of establishing public markets where gardeners and farmer may dispose of their products direct to the consumer with great benefit to both. It is stated that the fact farmers cannot sell their own crows in Portland without a license, and the further fact that the commission men will not buy from him except at their own prices, is causing many farmers to allow fruits and vegetables to go to waste rather than dispose of them at a loss.

Attention has recently been called, by the Oregon Agricultural College, to the fact that many farmers who are so unfortunate as to have hay injured or spoiled by rain are making the mistake of either burning it in the field or allowing it to rot in piles.
It is stated that spoiled clover or alfalfa hay is worth $8.00 to $10.00 per ton as a fertilizer if evenly spread over the fields and plowed under, and that every ton of hay so worked into the soil is approximately worth four tons of fresh manure. A ton of clover hay contains 40 pounds of nitrogen, 3 pounds of phosphorus and 30 pounds of potash, which, if purchased in the open market would cost the farmer about $10.50, and as clover and vetch are yielding about 2 1/2 tons per acre this season, the plowing under of the spoiled hay adds a fertilizer value of not less than $25 to each acre.

Stray Mares.

I have at my place on Balm Fork, two stray mares. One a dark iron gray, 4-year-old branded NS on hip; one a light gray, 2-year-old with same brand. Owner can get these animals by paying cost of advertising and pasturage. Have been at my place the past two months.
