BERLIN'S FINE STREETS.

Not Even a Scrap of Paper Mars Their Well Kept Pavements.

He is a fortunate traveler who enters Berlin from the west and toward the end of his journey rolls along over the twelve or fifteen miles of new streets, glides under the Brandenburger Tor and finds himself in Unter den Linden. The Kaiserdamm, Bismarckstrasse, Berlinerstrasse, Charlottenburger-chaussee, Unter den Linden, give the most splendid street entrance into a city in the world. The pavement is without a hole, without a crack and as clear of rubbish of any kind as a well kept kitchen floor. The cleanliness is so noticeable that one looks searching for even a scrap of paper, for some trace of negligence, to modify this superiority over the streets of our American cities. But there is no consolation. The superiority is so incontestable that no comparison is possible. For the whole twelve or fifteen miles the streets are lined with trees or shrubs or flowers, with well kept grass and with separate roads on each side for horsemen and foot passengers. In the spring and summer the streets are a veritable garden.

Broadway is eighty feet wide, Fifth avenue is 100 feet wide, the Champs Elysees is 233 feet wide, and Unter den Linden is 196 feet wide and has seventy feet of roadway.

The streets are cleaned for the benefit of the people and not for the benefit of the pockets of a political aristocracy. The public service is a guardian, not a predatory organization. In our country when a man can do nothing else he becomes a public servant. In Germany he can only become a public servant after severe examinations and ample proofs of fitness. The superiority of one service over the other is moral, not merely mechanical.

The street cleaning department is recruited from soldiers who have served their time, not over thirty-five years of age, and who must pass a doctor's examination and be passed also by the police. The rules as to their conduct, their uniforms, their rights and their duties, down to such minute carefulness as that they may not smoke on duty "except when engaged in peculiarly dirty and offensive labor," are here, as in all official matters in Germany, outlined in labyrinthine detail. Sickness, death, accident, are all provided for with a pension, and there are also certain gifts of money for long service. The police and the street cleaning department cooperate to enforce the law where private companies or the city owned street railways are negligent in making repairs or in replacing pavement that has been disturbed or destroyed. There is no escape. If the work is not done promptly and satisfactorily it is done by the city, charged against the delinquent and collected!—Price Collier's "Germany and the Germans."

Lithography.

Alois Senefelder, the discoverer of lithography, was a poor musician driven to many straits to find material on which to engrave his compositions. One morning, when busy at work, his mother asked him to make out the bill for the washing, and in his hurry he wrote out the bill upon a piece of his smoothed Kelheim stone. The stone was laid aside, and when he saw it again the ink was so firmly set that the possibility occurred to him of an acid which should eat away the stone when not protected by the ink, leaving the writing in relief. From that idea was born the art of lithography. —New York American.

The Intelligent Bird.

Two negroes in Washington were overheard discussing the intelligence of birds in general.

"Birds is shore sensible," observed one to the other. "Yo' kin learn them anything. I uster work for a lady that had one in a clock, an' when it was time to tell de time it uster come out an' say cuckoo jest as many times as de time was!"

"Yo' down say so?" asked the other negro incredulously.

"Shore thing!" responded the first negro. "But de mos' wonderful part was dat it was only a wooden bird too!"

Java's Fire Island.

One of the greatest wonders of Java, "the fire island," a large lake of boiling mud, is nearly two miles in circumference, and in the center immense columns of soft, hot mud may be seen continually rising and falling, like great black timbers thrust forth and then suddenly withdrawn by a giant's hand. Besides the phenomena of the columns, there are two gigantic bubbles near the western edge, which fill up like huge balloons and explode on an average three times per minute.
