A MARVELOUS SETTING FOR SCULPTURE AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION, 1915.

THE dominating architectural feature of the exposition the superb Tower of Jewels, which will command the south entrance of the Court of Sun and Stars at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco in 1915. This tower, 430 feet in height, will have a base one acre in extent. The tower will rise upward in terraces, giving way at last to a group of figures supporting a globe, typifying the world. The repeated figures of armored horsemen and of explorers of the ocean will be used on the tower, which, with its statuary, mural paintings and mosaics, will be indescribably beautiful. Messrs. Carrere & Hastings, architects in chief of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo in 1901, are the architects.

Gratitude Behind a Name.

During 1608 Sir Christopher Newport while cruising off the coast of North Carolina ran into a very severe storm. After being tossed about on the ocean for several days his ship was driven by the wind into Chesapeake bay and landed at a certain "point." Exhausted by his struggle with the ocean he found "comfort at last within this harbor" and he gave it the name of "Point Comfort."

After some years other places along the Atlantic seaboard were given the same name, and as the Virginia point was the oldest the word "Old" was added to distinguish it from the others.—Ladies Home Journal.

Jumped a Thousand Hurdles.

The craze for strange records began a great many years ago. There was an elderly London omnibus driver named Priestly, who at Hull, in 1863, jumped 1,000 hurdles each three feet six inches high in sixty-one and a half minutes. It is said that this record has never since been equalled. Priestly began omnibus driving in the same year, 1863, and during his forty-six years in the service of the London General Omnibus company he drove busses a distance of about 850,000 miles.—Strand Magazine.

Discouraging.

Mr. Jordan was touring by motor-car and arrived at a crowded village inn quite late in the evening. There was no spare bed to be had, which was a great disappointment, as he was tired and very much disliked the thought of driving farther that night.

"Haven't you at least a bundle of hay you can give me?" he demanded of the landlady.

"There isn't a thing left," she answered, "except a bit of cold roast beef."—Lippincott's.

Gladstone's Apology.

Mr. Gladstone once denounced certain members of the opposition as "a lot of truckling attorneys," a phrase which caused some indignation. On the following day he said: "I recently described some members as 'truckling attorneys.' I now wish to apologize"—some applause from the aggrieved parties interrupted him—"I now wish to apologize—to the attorneys."

THEEBAW'S RUBY RING.

He Thought a Great Deal More of It Than He Did of His Queen.

The greatest achievement of the late Sir Harry Prendergast, V. C., who lived until his seventy-ninth year, came in 1885-6, when he annexed Burma, a country larger than France, to the British empire and dethroned the infamous King Theebaw. "It is beyond doubt that in one day King Theebaw caused seventy or eighty members of the royal household to be massacred," said Sir Harry once. "But then this was strictly in accordance with the traditions of his position."

Sir Harry has himself described the surrender of Theebaw at Mandalay in the following words: "I went to the palace with twenty or thirty officers and an interpreter. King Theebaw sat on his throne under the awning of a veranda surrounded by his ministers and his wives and the queen mother.

"There was no trace of fear or anger in his demeanor. He was perfectly cool and polite. I informed him that it would be necessary for him to embark for India. He suggested a delay of three months, which was refused, then three weeks and finally three days. At length I took out my watch and said, 'I can give you ten minutes.'"

King Theebaw then implored Sir Harry not to rob him of a precious ruby ring or his wife. But as the general smiled in a mysterious way the king exclaimed, "Well, well, take my wife, but, oh, great commander, spare me my ring."

From the officer of the steamer in which the king and his court were taken into exile Sir Harry received a receipt for "one king, three queens, one prime minister, three councilors and so many maids of honor."—London Cor. New York Sun.

Royal Origin of "Blackguard."

The board of green cloth is responsible for inventing "blackguard," a word that has altered in original meaning. When first used it was not at all a term of reproach, but referred to the lowly but honorable occupation of carrying coal in the king's palace. Can you find any other bad word in the English language that can boast of such a royal origin?—London Chronicle.

It Happened in Boston.

The Customer—Here, waiter, take this soup away; there's a hair in it.

The Waiter (narrowly observing the offending intruder)—I beg your consideration, sir, but what you mistake for a human combing is merely a superficial and superimposed fracture of the queensware, sir.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
