JOHNS
REPUBLICAN
Governor

Give this Job to a man who will reduce Taxes
and cut down expenses

If you had an interest in a private business you would want it conducted on business principles. You have an interest in the affairs of this State. The State of Oregon is a business institution run for the benefit of the people in it who, in a certain sense, are stockholders in its business interests.

TAXES MUST BE REDUCED!

In the coming primary election, Charles A. Johns, of Portland, will ask the vote of every person who believes the State of Oregon needs to have taxes reduced and expenses cut down. The only way to reduce taxes and cut down expenses is to apply the same principles in running the State that you would apply in running your own business.

How many institutions would run along with an increase of operating expenses from year to year? Not many. Well, let's reduce our taxes and cut down our expenses. Charles A. Johns, of Portland, is running on that platform and stands on his platform. Get him on the job! Start thinking about this today!

Will you elect a man who will cut down expenses and reduce taxes, or a politician, as our next Governor? The issue is clear. One will cut down taxes—the other will give jobs to his political friends. Which do you want? Paid Advertisement.

Condon Times: The body of Edwin H. Worsham, the young man who shot himself through the head on Friday of last week, was shipped to Evansville, Indiana. His father, it seems, is a doctor and well to do. Nothing new transpired to account for the young fellow's rash act, although rumor has it that a letter from a woman was found torn up in his room. The case was so plainly one of suicide that Dr. Donnelly did not deem it necessary to hold an inquest.

RUGG BROS., Heppner, Ore.
A 30-3t.

ROOSEVELT.

Spokesman Review.

Roosevelt is 55. The average age of 24 presidents, Washington to McKinley, was 68 years, 4 months and 15 days. Had Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley been spared to round out their natural lives the average would be greater, probably 70 or more.

Our only ex-president therefore has a reasonable expectation of 15 years of vigorous existence. Since he is a rugged wonder, his span of life may carry him to 80, the age of John Quincy Adams at death, or 83 with Jefferson, or 85 with Madison, or even 90 with John Adams.

Proof that Roosevelt is a rugged wonder is found in his extraordinary mental vivacity and physical vigor after the strain of seven years in the White House. His amazing strength is without parallel in American history.

Grant, we believe, was the only ex-president to tour the world after two terms in the White House. Washington was weary and longed for the peace and quietude of rural life. John Adams wrote much in retirement. Jefferson interested himself in education and founded a college. Jackson retained his party's leadership. John Quincy Adams went to Congress. Tyler was in retirement from 1845 to 1860 and then was president of a peace conference. Fillmore commanded a corps in the civil war. Johnson served a short term in the United States Senate.

But all the other ex-presidents went into quiet retirement. None of them even measurably approached the strenuous after achievements of Roosevelt, who seems as young at 55 as most men at 30, and after two terms of president sets upon the hard task of exploring the planet. With all the eager enthusiasm of youth he plunges into the depths of the African jungle, and between continental explorations finds minor adventure in a strenuous and unsuccessful campaign for the presidency. Now he emerges from the trackless jungle of unexplored Brazil, where he traced for a thousand miles the unknown headwaters of a great river, emerging alive and sound from the hardships and perils that drove to madness one of his party and drowned another in the whirlpools of the angry river. Five of their seven canoes were sucked down in the turbulent rapids.

And here he is, "fit as a fiddle," to make another race for the presidency, lead a regiment, a brigade, a corps or a division in Mexico, write several books or race off to Tibet or the unexplored depths of Borneo. He is the world's most virile and interesting personality. Even his critics must confess him that.

RELIGION.

Belief in a religion, whatever it may be, is a saving, uplifting quality. It makes for the best in business life and for the highest citizenship. It may be said that this is not always true. There are backsliders in the churches, but there are more outside of them. The mere fact that a man who sins happens to be a church member causes general comment. So the exception proves the rule. It may be said that a man can be upright without having religious convictions. This is true, but the man or woman with strong religious convictions must be upright. It is "can" in the former and "must" in the latter instance. A merchant with a world-wide reputation for integrity, but with no church affiliations, said to the writer: I have profound respect for the merchant who sincerely believes in his religion, whether he be active in church work or not. My books show that these can be trusted above all others. They have involved me in much smaller losses than those who have had no church connections and no religious convictions. Is this not a refreshing word in the present period of doubt, distrust and discontent?—Leslie's.

Shearers to Huntington.

Jake Wattenburger, with his shearing plant and crew of 12 shearers, left yesterday for Huntington, where they will begin work as soon as the plant can be put in operation. Authentic reports state that 40,000 sheep will be sheared in the vicinity of Huntington this year by the Wattenburger crew. From that point the crew will move to Wallowa county, where other big jobs await them.

The men comprising the Wattenburger crew are: Wm., John, Jesse and Alex Oliver, Len Rhodes, Elmer Gibbs, Percy Ripper, Fred Stoppeburg, H. Gilbert, W. Schaffer, Albert Pearlburg and Dave McCarty.—Echo News.
