The second oiling of Heppner's streets is now in progress and this coating should form a sufficient crust to keep the dust down for many months to come. As it is being put on now there is a tendency to tracking into the places of business and on to the sidewalks and crossings but this condition will last but a few days as it takes but a short time for the crust to form. The proposition to oil other streets of the city is meeting with much favor and Marshal McCraw is having but little difficulty in getting residents along these streets to sign up. When the territory has been gone over and the signatures secured the city will begin the work of oiling and thenceforth Heppner will be known as "Dustless Town."
