Nunamaker Co. Displays New Sizer.

J. R. Nunamaker & Co. have placed on exhibition one of their new sizing machines, "The Pride of Oregon," invented this winter by Mr. Nunamaker, at the store room formerly occupied by Kelly Bros. on Fourth street. With Mr. Nunamaker are associated J. L. Volstorff and Geo. W. Dimmick.

The new machine, which distributes eight sizes, two grades at once, is one of the most simply constructed sizers ever placed on the market. The apples are placed in a groove between slats that move on an endless chain. The fruit passes beneath rake off boards which take the apples off, distributing them in bins for the packers, the big apples first. The small fruit is passed off at the end of the chain to be used for cider or whatever other use the grower may have for culls.

The machine is driven by a motor of one-thirtieth of a horse power. It takes about the same amount of energy to operate "The Pride of Oregon" as is taken for a 40-watt Mazda lamp. The motor is placed out of the way on top of the machine.

Mr. Nunamaker, known as the valley's "cherry king," invented a sizer that was placed on them market last year. The new machine, which has attracted a great deal of attention because of its simplicity and effectiveness, is far ahead of the machine put out last season.

"I made the machine this winter when I had nothing else to do in the evening but smoke and think," says Mr. Nunamaker. "I must have got out models for about five machines." —Hood River Glacier.
