MORROW COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER

Thursday, March 11, 1915.

KEEP QUARTER OF MILLION IN OREGON.

Portland has taken bids on $250,000 worth of cast iron water pipe for the municipal water system and a larger part will be made in Oregon.

This water pipe will be made at Oswego, where a large number of Portland men find employment all year around.

The Portland-Vancouver bridge will use $300,000 worth of fabricated steel, some of which will also be made at Portland.

The public funds used to purchase all this material should be expended on the product of home industry.

This quarter of a million dollars if sent away will never come back; if spent at home, it will be handled about five times over.

TAXES TO COME DOWN.

In both Oregon and Washington appropriations have been reduced, offices are being abolished and official salaries reduced.

Officials, boards and institutions in both states will not be allowed the freedom of the past in disbursing public funds.

A good precedent was established by Governor Withycombe of Oregon in promoting County Judge Daly of Lakeview to be Circuit Judge for keeping down taxes and getting his county out of debt.

Field engineers in the service of the water board are reduced in salary from $150 to $125 per month.

The office of State Architect was abolished, as he would have drawn a salary of $4500 for three years and the work could be done cheaper on a commission basis.

Governor Withycombe vetoed the creation of three new judicial districts and appointed two democrats to judgeships.

Some people wonder why eggs from the Chinese Empire are imported into the Western states and sold in direct competition with our Western product. The fact is, that while we advertise that we produce eggs cheaply and profitably on this coast, we are not producing enough for home consumption during the entire calendar year, therefore the trade demands more eggs, and the required supply is imported from the source where the dealers can get them the cheapest.

China has the eggs to sell, and our Western people have to import eggs for their home consumption as they are not producing enough for that purpose. Therefore, we get eggs from the Chinese sewer hens and the "Chinks" get our money.—Western Stock Journal.

THE AMERICAN LEGION.

An organization of 250,000 or 300,000 men who have had military training is not an impossible thing in the United States. They would not be enlisted for regular army service, nor for regular militia service. None the less they could be made, under proper direction, and owing to their past experiences, a very mobile body of troops ready for action at short notice. The plan, as formulated after several conferences in New York seems comprehensive enough. In these meetings the government may be said to have been represented by Maj. Gen. Wood, in command of the Military Department of the East, who was authorized to participate in the discussions. Commander Robert B. Crank of the navy has been representing that side of the fighting establishment.

Approximately 25,000 men are discharged from the United States army annually. The great majority of such men, those discharged even as long as ten or fifteen years ago, are still in the prime of physical manhood. It would not be impossible, we think, to find a quarter-million such men in the country now. Joining the proposed organization, which would be called the American Legion, would be voluntary. Not all the available would care to join, but it is easy to believe that the very great majority of them would, and that, with annual accretions, a reserve army of 300,000 men could be created. The same appeal would be made to men honorably discharged from the navy to fill the complements of crews in time of war. A naval reserve force of scores of thousands could be created in this way.

The government would, of course, have to arm the men and equip them in time of action. The scheme appears to have been well thought out in all of its details. Its central idea is the one of having at all times, subject to instant call, a large body of men trained not only in military service, but, as the statement makes plain in the very important military art of a man "taking care of himself in the open." And this would include, as we understand it, not only discharged soldiers, but any class of civilians whose service would be valuable in war. The plan, as it is reported, has no suggestion of militarism in it.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
