PORTLAND NEWS LETTER

Portland, May 11.—The opening of the Celilo Canal around the last obstructions to navigation on the Columbia, and the transfer to the government of the locks at Oregon City, on the Willamette, have added hundreds of miles of free open water to the commerce of Oregon and have made it possible for the agricultural sections of the state to take advantage of the low freight charges which are sure to result from the elimination of tolls and portage charges. Livestock, fruits, grains, minerals, lumber and wool can now be laid down on the dock at Portland or at Astoria at an immense saving over former cost, and a consequent increase of profits to the producer.

It now remains to see what use the people will make of the open rivers. While steamers can be operated more economically than railroad trains, they must have cargoes to transport or they cannot live. If the farmers continue to haul their produce to the railroad station because it is a little nearer, or the wagon road a little better, they will not only lose the benefit of cheaper transportation at the present time, but they will be making it impossible for the boats to operate at a profit, and within a short time the upper reaches of both our great streams will be as deserted and lonely as before the canals were built, and the enormous sums spent for improvements will have been wasted. The success or failure of the "open river" is up to the farmer more than to any other one class.

At a meeting of swine breeders at North Portland last Tuesday arrangements were perfected for furnishing the boys and girls of all sections of the state with breeding animals with which to make a start in the raising of pork for the market. The plan was inaugurated by the Union Stockyards some weeks ago, but the call for sows was so great that it was found necessary to enlist the aid of professional hog breeders in order to supply the demand. The stockyards will receive orders for sows, already bred, pass them on to the breeders who have agreed to furnish stock, and on receipt of a properly endorsed note from boy or girl, the animal will be shipped direct. The notes will become due and payable at the time the pigs are mature and ready for market.

Dates for the annual Gilliam County Fair have been set for September 23, 24 and 25. The Condon Business Mens Association will have charge of the fair and will employ an experienced man to visit every part of the county and collect exhibits.

At a meeting of the members of the newly organized Sherwood Commercial Club last Thursday night, the slogan: "Sherwood, the Onion City," was adopted.

Powers, a new town recently platted in Coos county, has set aside 30 acres of land to be occupied by factories and mills.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the People of Heppner and Vicinity:

Owing to the fact that the report is being generally circulated that I am contemplating leaving Heppner, I desire to inform the public that I am here to stay.

I have leased the shop connected with the Heppner Garage which is one of the best equipped automobile repair and machine shops in Eastern Oregon.

I have had years of experience as an expert automobile mechanic, guarantee all work turned out and personally inspect every car before permitting it to leave the shop, and make my charge as reasonable as possible, consistent with expert, reliable work, and assure you that I shall continue to do so.

Assuring you of my appreciation of your liberal patronage, I remain,

Respectfully yours,
JACOB KING.
