TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO IN HEPPNER

From the Gazette, August 28, 1890.

Ed Cliff and Bob Wills were up from lone Tuesday.

Born—To the wife of Lon Markham, on the 20th inst., a boy.

W. A. Kirk and family and Oscar Minor and family are in the mountains.

J. B. Natter, our former neighbor, is now at Petaluma, Calif. He and his family are very well.

Wiley McBee's son, Archie, aged 11 years, was thrown from a horse last week and received a broken arm.

Billy Gordon's team ran away near the mill one day last week, shedding bruised limbs and dust all around, but ending in nothing serious.

Hank Scherzinger's herder was shot at out in Greenhorn a short time ago, the bullet passing between his arm and body. Settlers don't like sheepmen.

O. E. Farnsworth and family have moved in from the country to their Heppner home.

Hay harvest has vastly changed the appearance of Morrow county's ranches. Horses and cattle pasture where the green grain grew, and large stacks of hay speak eloquently of the productiveness of our soil.

Martin Anderson, of Andersonville is back from Greenhorn. Shepherders are now in demand over there for rifle targets, and Martin, not liking the business, and being too thin for a good target anyhow, immediately resigned.

George E. Wright, of Lone Rock, is back from Michigan, where he spent last winter. He has had bad luck with his stock, losing two fine stallions worth $3,000 and getting poor prices for horses in the east.

W. A. Johnson has purchased a half interest in E. J. Slocum's drug business. Mr. Johnson is very well known here for his uprightness and good business qualities. The new firm is known as the "Slocum-Johnson Drug Co."

Mrs. Kate Parsell, the bright little woman of Alpine, who has the honor of being the first lady Notary Public in the state, visited the Gazette office yesterday. She says that her immediate section is not furnishing significant proof of a successful farming section, although there is considerable grain being threshed. Much hay has been put up, and as range is good adjoining and plenty of it, that ought to be a very desirable spot in which to winter stock, particularly sheep.

Morrow county has a rough, tough, old chap, Jim Smiley by name, who makes a business of getting drunk when he can get the whiskey, and in this beautiful condition, goes home and tries to tramp the life out of his little children and poor wife. But the neighbors are "onto" him, and will not wait a week for a justice of the peace, or a constable to help arrange matters, because they have tar, feathers and a blacksnake on hand. Heppner, itself, has a small edition, occasionally, of just such fellows as this Smiley.

On last Sunday a young son of Mr. J. B. Hunt, residing in Clark's canyon, was kicked on the leg between the knee and ankle by a wild horse, breaking both bones. Dr. Shipley was called and the fracture was reduced.

HOWARD ESTABROOK IN "OFFICER 666" WAS PROMINENT STAGE STAR

Howard Estabrook, who plays the lead in George Kliebe's "Officer 666" makes his debut as a picture actor in that film. In doing so he reverses custom, as the majority of present day picture actors have little or no claim to stage fame. As a matter of fact, an actor with a successful stage record is almost invariably a shining light in the film firmament. To succeed in theatricals he must be physically good to look at, possess brains, personality and another unnamed subtle power which makes or unmakes him. Some of these things, but not all, are essential to any wide success in film. Hence the actor who first makes his stage reputation has gone through the crucible, so to speak, and has had his powers tested beneath the withering fire of unbiased critics and unsympathetic Broadway first-nighters. Luckily many well known picture stars are saved to posterity by the happy fact that they never faced a Broadway gallery.

Howard Estabrook is a man of many and varied experiences. Aside from the having a long and successful stage history, Mr. Estabrook has been in the iron business and has meddled a bit with politics. He was born in Detroit, Michigan, where his father is one of the oldest established iron manufacturers in that part of the country. He resigned from the Country Treasurer's staff in 1904 to accept an engagement with Charles Frohman for William Collier Company in "The Dictator," played in same from New York to San Francisco and then to London, and, incidentally, before the late King Edward. "On the Quiet" next, and then first New York hit in "Brown of Harvard" followed by Clyde Fitch's selection for lead with Blanche Walsh in "The Straight Road," then to Daniel Frohman's management in "The Boys of Company B." He also played leads in "Going Some" and other plays, passed under management of William A. Brady for a term, his appearance including Holbrook Blinn in "The Boss," "Within the Law," "Little Women," "The Point of View," Grace George in "Divorens" and "Jim's Marriage," "The Things That Count" and other plays. He then was signed by David Belasco for his initial production of the present season, "The Vanishing Bride."

"Officer 666" will be exhibited at the Home Theater on Friday and Saturday, September 3 and 4.
