SAYS TRUST BILL IS PROVEN FRAUD

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—"The Clayton anti-trust law, heralded by the Democrats as a weapon against unlawful combination in restraint of trade, has proven to be a fraud."

This bitter criticism of the anti-trust law, passed by the last Democratic Congress, was uttered today by Representative Halvor Steenerson of Minnesota.

"For weeks I have been endeavoring to have the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission fix the responsibility for the increased price of gasoline, which I believe is due to an unlawful combination in restraint of trade," said Mr. Steenerson.

"The fact is that the provisions of the Clayton anti-trust act made it practically impossible for either the Department of Justice or the Federal Trade Commission to reach the situation. Formerly the government was able to prosecute any violation of the anti-trust laws in restraint of trade, irrespective of the effect on prices, so long as there appeared to be a combination which controlled prices. It was the power to fix prices that was condemned.

"The Clayton act provides for prosecution of 'substantial' lessening of competition. The insertion of the word 'substantial' in the Clayton law has practically taken all the teeth out of it. While comparatively easy to prove the existence of a combination, the Clayton law has enormously increased the difficulty of a conviction, owing to the absolutely indefinite meaning of the word 'substantial.'"

"Furthermore the Trade Commission law limits the investigations of that Commission to whether or not there has been an unlawful combination between manufacturers and dealers. In other words, this law protects the big jobbers and not the consumer.

"The Democrats by the insertion of this troublesome word 'substantial' in the Clayton act have emasculated the whole scheme of trust prosecution for violation of law, and have virtually committed a fraud upon those whom it was supposed to protect."

The Weather in Kansas City.

"Put up yer umbrella, Ma, it's rainin'!"

"All right, Pa, wait a minute."

"No use now, Ma, it's quit."

And that's how quickly the weather changes in Kansas City. There are two Kansas Cities, but the Missouri one is the one most used in conversation, polite and otherwise. Builded on more hills than Rome could ever scrape together, Kansas City swelters in summer and has 57 varieties of weather during the winter. Overcoats and ice cream pants hung side by side in the closet, and people generally take their furs and linen dusters down town with them at the same time.

Every wind that blows through Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska finds its way into Kansas City sometime during the course of its wanderings. If the sun is 100 in the shade up in St. Joe or over in Sedalia, it will be 110 in old K. C. But the people in the city are proud of this fact. "We are so different," they say.

Down by the old Union depot—which for 30 years claimed the distinction of being the worst building of its kind in the world, and through which more pretty girls passed than any other depot in the country—the wind would blow from three directions at the same time; you would ask for some real ice cold lemonade if you were on one side of the street, but would demand chili con carne with plenty of con if you happened to be on the other side. Trains from all parts arrived at the ancient depot at the same time; people coming from Minnesota would be overcome by the heat, while folks from Texas would be rushed to the emergency hospital to be treated for frost bites. And you never knew whether the old cable car that hauled you up the hill and over into the town would be preceded by a snow plow or a big electric fan.

But with all its wretched weather, Kansas City has many charms. If some of the days are drear, many of them are delightful. In K. C., the folks take the bitter with the sweet, smiling as prettily for one as for the other. And the men and women who have lived there ever hold many happy memories of the city of hills and weather.—Portland Telegram.

What Are YOU Worth From the NECK UP?

It is estimated that the average man is worth $2 a day from the neck down—what is he worth from the neck up?

That depends entirely upon training. If you are trained so that you plan and direct work you are worth ten times as much as the man who can work only under orders.

The International Correspondence Schools go to the man who is struggling along on small pay and say to him: "We will train you for promotion right where you are, or we will qualify you to take up a more congenial line of work at a much higher salary."

Every month several hundred students voluntarily report advancement as the direct result of I. C. S. training. You need not leave your present work, or your own home. Mark this coupon at once and mail it.
