RANGE CATTLE DIE BY POISONED PLANTS

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, June 5.—When Oregon stockmen of Cook county reported to their county agent the death of 16 head of cattle on the range, the agent immediately made an examination which led him to believe that the death of the cattle was caused by eating poisonous plants. This was thought the more likely because the stockmen had been changing their stock from one range to another when the accident occurred.

The agent thereupon gathered a number of plants and forwarded them to the botany department of the Agricultural College for identification. Among the plants of the collection were found three that are distinctly poisonous to cattle—death camas, larkspur and wild parsnip. It seems quite evident, therefore, that the loss may be due to the fact that the animals in changing pastures became very hungry and grazed without rejecting the poison plants.

Every year numerous losses of stock are sustained from this cause. Growers may be able to avoid the loss at least to a considerable extent by taking care that stock when exceptionally hungry, are not permitted to feed on ranges infested with the poisonous plants.

NEWS NOTES FROM NEIGHBORING CITIES

Canyon City has the first paved street in the county. The work is about complete and it will show just what a good road is and how it ought to be. This street is a country road but Canyon City is paying the bills as the county court does not feel justified to spend any money on this particular part of the county road. Canyon City is the only town in this part of the county that pays taxes into the general county road fund. This amounts to about $500 a year and then when any work is to be done the town has to do it. It is likely that a change in the town charter will be made so that this money will go to the town rather than to the county as in the case with Prairie City and John Day.—Blue Mt. Eagle.

The nice new barn on the Sam McGilvray residence property was burned to the ground on Thursday night. There was an automobile and some hay and feed in the barn and all was destroyed. The car was insured for $700 and the barn for $300, which will about pay half the loss.—Condon Times.

F. L. Kiltz, who has been working in Enterprise for the last month or two, left Sunday for his home in Promise where he will rejoin his family. Mr. Kiltz stated that he expects to move to Morrow county the last of the month.—Enterprise Record Chieftian.

Among the several big brick buildings to go up at Joseph this summer is an 80x160 ft. two story store building for the McCully Merc. Co., to cost about $25,000.—Joseph Herald.

Nearly 4,000 sheep were shipped from Condon yesterday. They were consigned to R. F. Bicknell at Omaha. These sheep were bought from S. B. Barker by Art Wheelhouse. A special train of seventeen cars took them out.—Condon Globe.

Rev. George B. VanWaters held services at the Episcopal church in this city last Sunday. He returned to his home in Portland on Monday.

Mrs. Mary A. Bartholomew returned Sunday from Portland where she attended the Rose chow. She motored to that city with her son, Chas. and family and went by the way of Glenwood, Wash. to visit with another son, Ed Bartholomew. They visited at Estacada while below.
