PORTLAND CLUB WILL ENTERTAIN VISITORS

As indicating the character of hospitality that is to be on tap in Oregon during the time of the conventions of the Supreme Lodge and the Supreme Temple, the Portland Press Club has sent out word that it will keep open house for all visiting Knights and Pythian Sisters between August 1 and 10. Its writing rooms, its library and the conveniences of a large assembly room are to be at the command of individual members, or committees.

The Press Club never closes its rooms in Portland. Its members are mostly newspaper men, a portion of whom work at night, and it is a rule that their club home shall be open at all times to receive the weary news gatherer.

As a social organization it occupies a unique place in the city. Its "high jinks" are always attended by hundreds of the most prominent men of the state of Oregon. Just recently the club had the 136 candidates for county offices at Portland on the carpet and grilled them without mercy.

When the Supreme Representatives arrive in Portland it is probable that the Press Club will have something arranged by which the common, ordinary, subordinate lodge man can see the starch taken out of their dignity.

The Portland committee is insistent that they will pull off an unusually interesting stunt when the pageant starts down the street. The programme committee is constantly adding new features to the list of daily events, so that every person in attendance will have something to look forward to, even though they are not members of the Supreme Lodge. In this respect Portland hopes to exceed any other city where these bodies have met.

A section of the big sea food dinner at Seaside will be devoted to mussels. They grow nowhere else as they do at Seaside and are a distinct delicacy. In fact the Knights at Astoria are herding and feeding oysters, clams mussels and salmon to get them into prime condition for the big frolic on the beach.

The other day when Oscar Keithley was coming to town from his Eight Mile farm in his tin Lizzie, he passed a freighter on the road. He had considerable difficulty in driving the colt back to its owners.

CLEANLINESS BIG FACTOR ON DAIRY FARMS

"Good cows, proper feed and strict cleanliness," said Farmer Jones, one of Oregon's most successful dairyman, "are the means by which I prepare my dairy products for a steady market at top prices the year round."

"Cleanliness must be strictly observed from the time the milk is drawn from the udder of the cow until it is delivered to the table of the consumer in the form of butter."

"We first wash the flanks and udder of the cow with a wet cloth. This does away with the practice that many milkers have of moistening their hands either in milk or water, which leads to bacterial contamination."

"The protected milk pails, cans and all the equipment used have been thoroughly washed and disinfected. The hands and clothing of the milkers are also scrupulously clean."

"As soon as possible after milking the milk is placed in large cans in which it is taken to the creamery. In order to get the benefit of the care of the milk up to this time it is essential that cleanliness be observed in the creamery."

"We next run the milk through the separator after which the cream is properly ripened and put into the churn. In handling the butter care is taken that no part of the body or clothing comes in contact with it. When molded and wrapped according to the Oregon dairy laws we are ready to guarantee it as a superior product and will stand back on the guarantee."

"In the Northwest it is the usual practice to run the milk through the separator on the farm after which the cream is taken to the creamery where it is pasteurized and ripened in a large vat. In these vats it is mixed with milk from all the patrons of the creamery, from which it is seen that cleanliness on all the farms contributing is an essential factor."—O. A. C. Press Bulletin.

When you need two-vision lenses—be sure to get KRYPTOK LENSES

(Worn by over 250,000 people)

For in all other two-vision lenses there is a line or seam between the near and far vision portions that makes the wearer look less than his best, and unmistakably brands him or her with a sign of age.

Kryptok are double-vision lenses that look exactly like regular one-vision lenses because there are no lines or seams in them.

Dr. Winnard can supply these lenses
