MORROW COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER

Thursday, August 3, 1916

Lexington is retaining her old reputation at the center of Morrow county's wheat producing belt.

It has been estimated that the wheat crop of Morrow county will amount to over $2,000,000 this year.

While we are looking to the completion of the Heppner-Ritter road we might turn a part of our attention to the roads leading immediately into Heppner.

Heppner didn't have a Chautauqua this year. We missed many of the good things that some of our neighboring cities enjoyed.

This has been a year of years in many respects. In spite of the late growing season, grain has been permitted to mature as never before.

Chas B. Cox, who is farming the Her ranch west of Heppner has wheat that in size resembles grains of pop corn.

The city is doing some commendable work in clearing the channel which runs east and west across the upper end of Chase street.

The people of Bend are about to abandon the fight to wrest the county seat from Prineville and are going to favor the county division bill.

A MARVELOUS FEAT.

Whether the Deutschland ever reaches a home port or not, we think it is no breach of neutrality to say that the feat of bringing her through storms and watching enemies to port with a full cargo and in good form was a marvelous feat of courage and scientific handling.

We cannot see how any man with any imagination can ever go to sea in a submarine.

The Iliad tells us that after Hector had slain Patroclus and stripped him of the famous armour, the struggle was for the possession of the body of the Greek, and the fight around the corpse was furious until the night closed down so intensely dark that the Greek could not see the men of Troy.

That old story makes clear how a man with any imagination must feel in a submarine with a roaring ocean or the engines of a war ship in motion overhead and that thought magnifies the courage, the skill, the steady patience and the tenacity of purpose that must have possessed the souls of men who brought the Deutschland from a home port through four thousand miles of storms and enemies, safe to port.

BREAKING THE SAD NEWS TO THE GERMAN PEOPLE.

Day begins to dawn in Germany. It's long night of obsession with the fallacy that it could not lose the war breaks before the terrible logic of Verdun, the sea fight off Jutland and the persisting offensive of England, France and Russia.

Mrs. H. Tash, Heppner, says: "A few months ago I was almost past going with backache and bladder trouble. For several weeks I could hardly get about, I felt so miserable. My back felt weak and sore and at times I could hardly straighten up when I got down. I could hardly walk. My kidneys were so weak that I could scarcely control the kidney secretions.

moral support. The procedure is no mere formality. It is the compulsion from relentless necessity. Major Morait, the military expounder for the government, characterizes the militarists' appeal as "of the utmost importance."

The temper as well as the navy and army of Germany has taken to the defensive. The government has permitted free and full circulation of British, French, Italian and Russian statements about their offensives. It publishes nothing to counteract the truth. For the first time since the war opened Germany is faced with facts.

The beer brewers of the state have launched a campaign to place Oregon back in the wet column. They want to reorganize a new and improved order of foam blowers. They need the money. With tears in their eyes and with a sob on the air they are weeping, wailing and gnashing their teeth over the misfortune of the poor hop man.

Let the brewers make the beer and keep the money at home so that they can wear diamonds that look like the search lights on a Packard. If this self-annointed hand picked bunch of beer boosters are really in earnest and there is the slightest sincerity in their expressed interest in the state how would it do to adopt their plan of keeping the money in the state by the prohibition of the importation of beer.

Volunteer fire fighters, when needed, are summoned to the aid of the Forest rangers by the blowing of a certain signal on steam whistles in many towns in or near National Forests in Southern California.

County Commissioner, E. L. Padberg of Ione attended the monthly meeting of the county court in this city Wednesday. Mr. Padberg reports harvest well under way in the Ione country. His two brothers, Will and Louis are harvesting and threshing together. Barley on the Louis Padberg ranch is producing 35 bushels to the acre. Will Padberg will have 2500 acres to harvest this year and expects to have $35,000 worth of wheat.
