NOW IS THE TIME FOR PLANTING ALFALFA

By R. W. Allen in Hermiston Herald.
From now until September 15, anticipating that weather conditions will be normal, is the best time of the year to sow alfalfa. It might be carried on until the first of October, or even later some years without loss of the new plants by freezing, but no loss has occurred by frost during the past seven years from seed sown before September 15 provided the soil was kept moist.
There are several advantages in sowing alfalfa at this season of the year. The most important is the small amount of care that is necessary to grow the little plants as compared with planting in the spring when days are longer and the weather warmer. There is less wind now than in the spring, which causes much less damage of loss from this cause. Alfalfa sown now will make considerable growth before winter and starts off readily in the spring making a much stronger growth than would be gotten from spring sown fields.
Extreme care should be taken to have the land well prepared by thorough grading, and by putting on straw to prevent erosion by the wind, which readily destroys the young plants and renders the land unlevel making it difficult to irrigate properly.
As a result of careful study and numerous trials in methods of handling water on the characteristic soils of this region which have been in process at the Experiment Station during the past eight years it has been found that the new border system of irrigation has many advantages over others that are in more or less general use. Land that is not rough in topography is easily prepared for this system of handling. It causes a minimum of obstruction to field operations of harvesting and effects a great saving of time and water in irrigating. In the irrigation plots on the Experiment Station land is being effectively irrigated by this system with 2 to 4 inches of water at an application and with very little labor in attending to it. Irrigation with so small an amount of water can only be done where the land is prepared perfectly. This strongly emphasizes what has been found repeatedly in farm operations, namely that in the end the cheapest way to prepare land for irrigation is to do the work thoroughly in the beginning.
Details of preparing land to get best results, and to get a successful stand of alfalfa will gladly be given by the staff of the experiment station, or by Paul S. Jones, who is prepared to personally visit tracts of land being prepared for crops and assist in laying out ditches and to recommend the best methods of preparing the land.
The run of salmon in the Rogue river this year is the greatest ever known in the history of the place. R. L. Maceay who was here yesterday from Wedderburn says that his concern, the Wedderburn trading company will have its record pack. The company has raised the price of fish. The fishermen now get $1.25 each for salmon when they used the company's nets and $1.50 each when they furnished their own nets. The fishing season closes August 25 and opens again on September 10.—Eugene Register.

As a result of meetings held here on Thursday and Monday nights a final decision concerning lines for a division of Cook county has been made. If agreed to by the east side, and the support necessary to obtain the statutory 35 per cent vote is promised division will be proceeded with. Otherwise a return will be made to the county seat removal plan.—Bend Bulletin.
People of Morrow county who want concessions at the Morrow County Fair should make their choice of location at once as outside concessionaires are asking for space daily, and it is the desire of the Board to give home people first choice where possible.
