PSYCHO-ANALYSIS SUBJECT OF NEW PICTURE

To Be Seen At Star Theatre, Sunday, October 15.

Psycho-analysis, a branch of psychology which of recent years has been the earnest study of learned men in this country and Europe, but which until recently had never been placed before the public because of the lack of definite results, is used as the theme for "Milestone of Life," a four-part Mutual Masterpicture produced at the Thanhouser studios in New Rochelle, N. Y.

In "Milestone of Life," however, this modern phrase of psychology is so realistically presented by a capable company of players, headed by captivating Mignon Anderson, that it is found to furnish the means for nation wide discussion. Mental problems date back to the foundation of society itself, but until the recently heralded advent of psycho-analysis no definite solution had ever been reached.

For example, it is well known that things which happen in early life in many instances have a strong influence in the molding of that person's career in later years. This is particularly emphasized in "Milestone of Life," but presented in such a way as to leave the question open for discussion, according to the personal views of the person witnessing the play.

For the presentation of this vitally interesting Masterpicture, Edwin Thanhouser gathered an exceptionally talented group of players, including Miss Anderson, Harris Gordon, Louise Rutter, Arthur Bauer, Leland Benham and popular little Helen Badgley, star in numerous Thanhouser productions despite the fact that she is only seven years old.

"Milestone of Life," despite the seriousness of the topic dealt with, abounds in human interest with every one of the four parts crowded with romance, heartbeats and unusual climaxes. Mr. Thanhouser assumed personal charge of the settings used in "Milestone of Life" and observed the screening of every scene shown, a striking tribute to the all important factor on which it is based.

The story dates back to the time when William Hallett, a cherub faced little boy, was the boon companion of Pauline Avon. Like himself the only child of wealthy parents. In "mud pie" days they swore that when they were old enough they would marry. When William was eight years old Frances, a beautiful creature of seventeen, came to visit the Hallett's. William, fascinated by the wondrous beauty of the visitor, forgot all about Pauline and in a moment of childish impulse scribbled a note to Frances which he laid his heart at her feet.

Frances laughed and shortly after married a man much older than herself but nevertheless maintained ownership of the note. As the years went by he found solace in the person of Pauline, their marriage being celebrated some time later. Among the guests at the ceremony was Francis and Pauline, remembering the spell she had cast over her husband at their first meeting, resented the attentions she was paying her husband. The latter took them to the city where Francis resided, now a sad faced, gloomy woman of middle age, mourning the death of her only child. They were thrown much into each other's company, Pauline's jealousy growing apace.

Then one day Frances heard from the doctor that a year was all she could hope to live. Neglected by her husband and facing death, she was seized by a great temptation. What should she do during the last year? Enjoy the fleeting months or remain at home to die? While still debating the problem she met William and, learning that he was on his way west on a business trip, determined to accompany him. On the train she astonished him by protesting her love for him. Then she informed him that she had left a letter for her husband explaining fully her rash act.

Astounded, William left the train and hurried back to the city arriving in time to recover the letter, still unopened. Frances died when the train crashed into an open switch.

Pauline, however, learning of her presence on the train with her husband, left him, and for many years they continued to live apart, he in the city, she in the country some miles away. Then fate brought them together again. Explanations followed the wife agreeing that her suspicions were unfounded and the husband agreeing that both had been overproud and unbending. So they forgave and forgot and some years later, passed through the shadows into the great beyond, each rejoicing that reconciliation had come before it was too late.

Mrs. John Cason, who resides above town on Willow creek, underwent a serious operation last week when a tumor was removed from her arm. The growth was causing paralysis but since the operation all ill effects are leaving and she is recovering the use of her arm.

NEWS NOTES FROM NEIGHBORING CITIES

Clay Porter Best Rider.

Clay Porter of Long creek was declared the best rider at the county fair. He rode for three days and rode everything that came to him. It was a close contest between he and Curry. The boys had some hard mounts but they made clean rides, rode loose and scratched their mounts. Last year the event was won by Dave Helmick, 62 years old. Porter rode in the semi-finals at the Round-Up in Pendleton. The fair at John Day does not use any trick horse but just the rough stuff at it develops on the range. During the last few years several good horses have been developed at the John Day fair. Two of the horses out of the three in the finals at the Round-Up at Pendleton this year came from the John Day track. They were Speedball which was sold by James Anderson of Prairie City and Angel, which was raised by Jim Angel of Izee. A third horse at the Round-Up was Izee. This horse which is a good one did not get to the finals.—Blue Mt. Eagle

About Former Resident.

Mrs. S. P. Shutt, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. E. M. Curran in Portland, has gone to Heppner to visit her mother and sister. Soon she will join her husband in Chicago and from there they go to their new home in Virginia. They are abandoning the publishing business for that of stock raising. We venture the guess that they will never get rid of hankering for the inky smell of a print shop.—Sunnyside, Portland, Gazette.

Mr. and Mrs. Shutt were formerly residents of this city, in fact were among the pioneers. Mr. Shutt started the Condon Globe here in 1891.—Condon Globe.

MAYOR KYLE HURT.

In Wreck on Seattle Interurban Railway.

In an interurban wreck on the Seattle Interurban Railway Company's lines at Seattle, Tuesday, James M. Kyle, mayor of Stanfield, was slightly injured. He was cut about the eye and suffered bruises on his left leg. Mr. Kyle is at present at the General Hospital, Tacoma, and he expects to be out again within a day or so.

This is the second accident Mr. Kyle has been in this year. While on his campaign in the spring, he was in an auto which was wrecked at Bend and he suffered some painful injuries then.

Mr. Kyle is at present connected with McPherson Brothers, who are colonizing irrigation projects in the Northwest.—Stanfield Standard.

HARDMAN ITEMS

During the past few months, the apparently peaceful little town of Hardman has awakened to her possibilities and is making a name for herself in Morrow County. Should we appear boastful allow us to point out the fact that during the recent Morrow County Fair two of our fellow citizens carried off first money in their respective events. Allow us to introduce to you Glen Hadley, at present champion wrestler of Morrow County and Walter Furlong, champion buckaroo of the above named county. Both boys, we are proud to say, claim Hardman as their home.

The Hardman school opened Sept. 6, with an enrollment of 75 pupils. Mr. Peir is principal of the school and we are looking forward to a banner year.

One of our popular young ladies, Miss Faye Kirk, was surprised by a number of her friends last Thursday evening in honor of her birthday. We wish you many more happy birthdays Faye.

J. B. Adams has bought the Leiper property and will move his family into town in the near future.

Ivan Leathers returned Tuesday evening from a weeks visit in the John Day country.

The boys and girls have organized basket ball teams and would like to play a number of outside games this winter. Both teams are doing good work and we have every prospect of having a good team. Much credit is due the captains of the respective teams, Ivan Leathers and Miss Gaunt for the good showing thus far.

The students of the school have organized an athletic association and expect to take a prominent part in the athletics of Morrow County. The officers of the association are, Ivan Leathers, Pres.; Miss Hayes, Vice Pres.; Miss Nellie Wright, Sec-Treas. and Vernon Leathers, yell leader. Besides the basket ball, plans are under way for a volley ball team.

The association is planning on giving a first class entertainment Oct. 21. Miss Osten, our popular primary teacher has charge of the program and we know it will be good. The association extends an invitation to the public to be present.
