WHAT WOODROW WILSON REALLY THINKS OF LABOR

Woodrow Wilson, candidate, is suddenly posing as a great friend of labor and a great believer in labor unions.

Woodrow Wilson, before entering national politics, held decided views on the labor question which do not square with his professions of today.

Which Woodrow Wilson will occupy the White House after the 4th of next March, if the electorate this fall should confer upon him another term as President? What would be his attitude toward labor then, when he had no further favors to ask of the voters?

The labor views of Woodrow Wilson, private citizen, are interesting.

On February 25, 1905 at the People's Forum in New Rochelle, New York, Mr. Wilson said:

"Labor Unions reward the shiftless and incompetent at the expense of the able and industrious."

At the same meeting he further said:

"The objections I have to Labor unions is that they drag the highest man to the level of the lowest. I must demur with the labor unions when they say, 'You must award the dull the same as you award those with special gifts.'"

WHERE THE FARMER COMES IN.

(From the Minneapolis Tribune)

When "Tama Jim" Wilson, that hard-headed son of Scotland, says anything about the American farmer, the men of the soil are quite likely to take notice. He was 80 years old a month or so ago. He began farming fifty-five years ago. He was in the cabinet of three presidents—McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft—as Secretary of Agriculture. It is fair to presume that one of his years has no ambition to get back into the harness of public life. It is also fair to presume that he speaks as an unbiased American citizen when he declares that upon the farmers of this country will fall the great burden of paying the $50,000,000 bill which President Wilson and his servile Congress have passed along to the people with the Adamson law.

The former cabinet member says that the farmer is willing to take his share of any burden, but adds that he will get a good deal more than is coming to him in the matter of bill-paying as a result of the operation of the Adamson act. The railroads will get the $50,000,000 from the shippers, he says, and the farmers constitute a majority of the shippers. The man who tills the soil will go down in his pockets to help pay ten hours' wages for eight hours' work for that fifth of the railroad employes who are already receiving much higher wages than the other four-fifths. He will work from sunrise to sunset. No eight hours limit for the farmer.

"The farmers," said Mr. Wilson, "are unorganized, unable to restrict their labor to eight hours a day, obliged to sell the product of their labor at prices fixed by the ordinary influences of supply and demand. It is entirely antagonistic to their interests to have a small group of men employed by the railways allowed to fix their pay for carrying the produce of the country at the cost of the producers and consumers."

To other classes besides the farmers is coming home the true import of the Adamson law and the manner of its enactment. The electorate is learning that the measure does not test high in human welfare ingredients, but that it does test big in political chicanery.

BREWERS' AMENDMENT A MENACE.

The brewers' amendment would ruin the loganberry juice manufacture; bankrupt the loganberry grower.

It would handicap railway construction.

It would hamper establishment of shipbuilding.

It would be detrimental to logging and sawmilling.

It would compel all business to readjust itself to saloon conditions, and brewery-dictated legislation.

It would decrease savings.

It would increase public expense.

It would lessen the amount of our capital for investment.

It would legalize liquor selling to children.

It would permit the establishment of original package saloons next to school houses or your own home, no matter where it is.

In his Heppner speech last night, Dr. Harry Lane, United States Senator from Oregon drew a touching word picture as to the terrible conditions in war-scourged Europe. Only a few minutes before he had pointed with pride to the prosperity in this country at the present time and called attention to the high price our farmers are receiving for wheat. This is a case where Europe's misery is our glory.

In another column of this paper will be found an article by S. E. Notson relative to a general road straying day. His suggestions are timely and should be followed out with all speed. That straying improves a rough road nearly one hundred per cent is clearly demonstrated where it has been used on some portions of our roads.

Why Advertising in THE GAZETTE-TIMES

Brings Results to the Advertiser—

Being the fourth of a series of advertising talks by the "Devil."

The Circulation of The Gazette-Times.

That the circulation of The Gazette-Times covers the field like a blanket can easily be seen when the fact is taken into consideration that The Gazette-Times has a circulation of 1200 in a territory of which the population is not over 6000.

Advertising experts figure five readers for each subscriber, so it would not be exaggeration to state that The Gazette-Times is read by every person in its field.

Next week we will give a summary of the former "talks" and sum up the reasons why The Gazette-Times is the best advertising medium in Morrow county.
