BALLOT TITLES CONFUSING TO VOTERS

Danger of Mistaking Single Tax For Rural Credits.

"The Full Rental Value Land Tax & Homemaker's Loan Fund Amendment" is the ballot title for measure No. 306 & 307. "The Rural Credits Amendment" is the ballot title for amendment No. 318 & 319. There is danger that these titles may be confusing. The word "loan" in No. 306 & 307 may lead some voters to believe that it is "The Rural Credits Amendment." Voters should be very careful in distinguishing between these two measures on election day.

There is the widest possible difference in the effect which the adoption of these two measures would have. Amendment No. 306 & 307 is a single tax measure and has for its purpose the confiscation of private ownership in land. Amendment No. 318 & 319 is just what its name implies: an amendment giving rural credits or cheap money to the farmers. The first amendment No. 306 & 307 would simply ruin the state of Oregon if it were adopted. The last amendment No. 318 & 319 will build up Oregon by giving the farmer sheep money with which to bring his farm up to a high state of improvement and cultivation.

To defeat single tax vote 307 X NO. To get Rural Credits vote 318 X YES.

NEWS NOTES FROM NEIGHBORING CITIES

Auto Trucks Shorten Miles on Wallowa County Roads.

Auto trucks give promise of solving the freight transportation problem for interior Wallowa county points. Two heavy trucks are now in service between Enterprise and outlying points, and they have proved a great success while the roads are hard and at all smooth.

The first truck was put into this service by the W. H. Bohnenkamp store at Flora. Since the roads settled in the spring the car has been used steadily and has hauled several hundred tons of freight to the north end store. It has been in demand frequently for passenger travel, also, as it makes far better time than a team drawing a load.

This fall a greater innovation was introduced by B. W. Hamilton and his son O. S. Hamilton. They bought a new three ton truck for hauling grain in from the distant farms. It has been in use night and day much of the time since threshing got under way, making trips to points 30 miles from town, near Zumwalt. The truck carries 65 to 70 sacks of wheat, weighing up to 8400 pounds, and is so much faster on the road than horses that grain is moved far quicker than ever before.

Frequently the driver would meet a team loaded with grain a few miles out from town. The truck would go to its destination east of Crow creek and return with its load, overtaking the horse-drawn freight wagon before reaching town.

B. W. Hamilton ran the car on the day run until he was taken ill, and O. S. Hamilton had the night shift. Now the latter is alone on the job, but he is seeking a competent driver so that the machine can be kept on the road continuously.

The success of auto trucks in the county depends wholly on the roads. When the highways are brought to a condition where they will be hard the year round, the expense of hauling will be lessened, and the time required will be reduced greatly.—Enterprise Record Chieftain.

The Naming of Butter Creek.

The versions of how Butter creek came to be named have been published by the Tribune as follows:

John S. Vinson of Freewater from whom the townsite of Vinson was named gives the origin, as he heard it from the early settlers. Some travelers in pioneer days camped on lower Butter creek. Among their edibles was a tub of butter. During the night the animals roaming about the camp rolled the tub with its contents into the creek. The stream was afterwards called Butter creek.

J. P. Earl is positive that Vinson's version is wrong and he gives the following account:

Along in 1848 occurred the first Cayuse war, followed by the Whitman massacre. A volunteer army set forth to capture the redskins. S. D. Earl, his father, and an uncle were in this army. It seems they were aiding the wagons of the commissary which got ahead of the army. Two wagons camped on the creek overnight. The men had only sugar and butter to eat until the other wagons caught up with them.

They considered a meal of butter worthy of commemoration and accordingly named the creek Butter creek.—Echo News.

Transfer Garage Ownership

A deal was closed this week whereby Snell & Lemon become the proprietors of the property formerly occupied by Montague Company.

The new owners have commenced to improve the property considerably and intend to have a first class garage and accessory room. Among the improvements already made are the building of an accessory room and office, an oil room, and are also building a 30x40 repair shop in the rear of the garage used by the Montague Co. which will leave the whole of the building for storage.

They will have within a few days one or two first class mechanics, some new machinery etc. Which combined with their new location will make one of the best garages in this neighborhood.—Arlington Independent.

Brings in Sheep.

Over 11,000 head of sheep have already been brought into Stanfield for the feeding season by Frank Sloan. He has been picking them up at various places in three states. Oregon, Idaho and Nevada. A large shipment arrived Tuesday.—Stanfield Standard.

Dr. Buy Blayden returned this noon from Baker where he attended the convention of the State Medical association. He was honored with election as president.—Pendleton Tribune.

Lambs Sell for $5.75.

Mike and Pat Doherty of Butter creek have sold their lambs to R. Maxwell for $5.75 per head. They have been running their sheep in the Wallowa country during the summer but left the first of the month for the Rust ranch on Butter creek.—Blue Mt. Eagle.
