NEWS NOTES FROM NEIGHBORING CITIES

Jack Eads Will Serve From Five to Fifteen Years for the Crime of Arson.

From five to fifteen years was the sentence that Jack Eads got here Monday when he came up before Judge Biggs. Eads was indicted, tried and convicted for the burning of the dance hall at Monument, on the evening of December 31, 1915. Business rivalry and bitter enmity prompted the incendiary act. The fire was started at midnight and at a time when a dance was in progress. There were many witnesses called and when the links of circumstances were forged together there was a chain of circumstantial evidence so convincing that the jury found the verdict of guilty. Eads was a law breaker. He has been in trouble continually. He was convicted of bootlegging and many of the witnesses that were on the stand said that they had bought illicit whiskey from Eads.

When Eads received his sentence he was asked if he had anything to say. He said: "You are convicting an innocent man, I am not guilty as charged." The court replied that he was convicted from the evidence that Eads was guilty and the law provided a penalty of from 5 to 15 years. Eads has been the source of much trouble. He is a man about 55 years old. His wife is less than 20 years old has a child about 13 months old. He was taken to the penitentiary this week.—Caynon City Blue Mt. Eagle.

THE CUB REPORTER.

What the Young Man Wrote and What Appeared in the Paper.

The graduate of the school of journalism secured a job as reporter on a big daily. There was a fire on Smith street, and the graduate was assigned to cover it. This is what the graduate wrote about the fire.

"The grim, red god of fire demanded his toll on Smith street yesterday. Pandemonium prevailed when he slaked his appetite on a magnificent residence at 4 p. m. The building was soon one continuous, seething inferno, and great tongues of flame leaped high towards the heavens, seeking to poison with their fury the billows of smoke and send them on and away to carry further destruction elsewhere. Great streaks of livid light shot through the pall of blackness which hung overhead and outlined the monster rolling gaseous clouds in grim and gastly gaunts. Soon the residence, stood a specter of its former self, its massive timbers holding up and standing forth and holding like huge skeletons lashed by the hellish tongues of the furies of inferno."

And this is what the graduate saw in the paper next morning when the copy reader got through handling the story:

"A small frame dwelling at 10 Smith street was destroyed by fire yesterday. No lives were lost."—Luke McLuke.

Jewett Tries to Bulldog Doe But Now He's Sorry.

Stanley G. Jewett, of the U. S. Biological Survey had an interesting experience during his recent trip into the Rogue River country. A doe stepped into a trap set for coyotes and the hunter knew of no way to release it without killing it. Jewett decided he had seen enough of the Round-Up to bulldog it. He reached for an ear and was butted over. The fine work was all off. He grabbed the animal by a fore foot and a hind one and downed it. The hunter released the trap.

The animal was free but the inspector wasn't. He let the doe go and she proceeded to butt him over. Two or three times he had this experience. The animal did not attempt to strike, apparently getting all the necessary action out of her battering ram tactics. Finally Jewett lost patience and picked up the deer, climbed out of the pothole where the trap had been set, put the deer down on the ground and ran for his life for about 15 feet. The doe looked after him, saw that he was too far away to butt and turning ran off into the woods.

Jewett says that he has proven that a deer may be released from a trap without killing it and he thinks he would like to see what a buck would do. In this wish he was joined by the office force but they were content to have the inspector perform the experiment.—Pendleton Tribune.

Potatoes Suffer In Recent Cold Spell.

Old King Winter did a fell trick, struck a blow beneath the belt to Umatilla county potato raisers when recently he swept down "like a wolf on the fold," and froze hundreds of bushels of spuds in Eastern Oregon.

A local commission man in discussing the situation today, stated his belief that the sudden cold snap did no less damage than between $35,000 and $40,000 damage.

Many of the farmers, believing the fall would be a long one, delayed their potato digging, until it was too late. It was said that one farmer near Echo had 10 acres in potatoes. He had contracted to sell them for $1.75 a bushel as soon as they were dug. He waited to build a barn and the cold spell hit him. Everything was lost and he will even have to buy his seed for next year.—Pendleton Tribune.
