CHILD LABOR

To the Editor:

Every good mother and father is concerned with how child labor is regulated in Oregon. At present labor laws are enforced by a commission of four devoted women and one man. The total expense to the state is less than $5,000 for each two-year appropriation period.

These four women have at heart the welfare of the child. They are: Miss Pauline Kline of Corvallis, Mrs. Millie R. Trumbull of Portland, Mrs. Turner Oliver of La Grande, and Mrs. Sarah A. Evans of Portland. Mrs. Trumbull is secretary of the board and the only paid executive in charge of the work.

She is sensible and experienced, a woman of judgement and courage. Her work requires rare qualities of tact, patience and firmness in dealing with rapacious employes and greedy parents who conspire to make little children lie about their ages so as to evade the law. She brings to bear upon her work the experience and training of years of social service, and that genuine affection for children which places their welfare before all selfish considerations.

This work is now in jeopardy, as legislators propose to consolidate it into one of the paid political boards, where it would be administered as a mere detail by state officers busy with many other matters and concerned primarily with making political records for themselves. This would be sacrificing the children's welfare on the altar of political consolidation.

I urge good mothers and fathers to write to their members of the Senate and House beseeching them to consider the little children and not let the politicians get control of Oregon's child labor administration.

C. C. CHAPMAN.

FOREST NOTES.

A rapid method of kiln-drying eastern hemlock has been developed at the Forest Products Laboratory at Madison, Wisconsin, whereby ship-lap can be dried green from the saw to shipping weight in forty-eight hours. By this method two-inch plank can be dried to shipping weight in six to eight days.

It is estimated that four-fifths of the water available for irrigation and domestic use in the state of Oregon comes from the timber clad slopes of the National Forests. The average acre of National Forest Land in the state sends to the streams sixteen times as much water as does the average of land outside the Forest boundaries.

Fires burned twenty-five million board feet of timber on the National Forests of Oregon, Washington and Alaska in 1916. The Forest Service fought 1176 fires in this region during the year at an expense of $19,000.

The plantings of the Oriental timber bamboo in northern Florida and Louisiana have grown to a height of 25 feet, and there is no longer any question about their producing in this country, good canes comparable to those which they produce in China and Japan. A quick method of their propagation has been worked out so that it will be now possible to set out many small areas throughout the South, from the Carolinas to California wherever there is sufficient moisture and the land is not too high priced to admit of their cultivation.

BUICK DESIGN

BUICK VALVE-IN-HEAD POWER

The rightness of the Buick Valve-in-Head motor and not the enthusiasm of its salesmen has made the Buick conspicuous for leadership.

This new four has a Buick Valve-in-Head motor (with electric starter) which develops thirty-five horse power on brake test and is so reliable for rugged service that no eulogy is necessary among "men who know Buick."

Its lines are beautiful. Finish and color are exceptional. Deep, tufted black genuine leather upholstery. Covered floor and running board, with aluminum bindings, give a trimness of appearance that is peculiarly Buick.

Body, hood, fenders and running gear are painted a glossy, long-wearing black; wheels are black with white stripes. Tires 31x4 inches.
