NINE POINTS OF MERIT IN "WANTED-A HOME"

In support of the claim of Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., that "The Play's the Thing" the five-act drama, "Wanted—A Home" will be exhibited at the Star theatre on Saturday, March 24, and as in substantiation of its superiority over the ordinary variety of motion pictures the following points of merit are specifically advanced:

1. The Smalleys, comprising Lois Weber, and her husband, Phillips Smalley, directed the production and Miss Weber provided the scenario. The preponderant essential to a superior moving picture lies in the skill in which its actors are directed, once a play is accepted for presentation.

2. Good direction very naturally waits upon a good play, and the fact that Lois Weber has furnished the story is assurance in this instance of excellence. In substantiation, witness previous releases on the Bluebird program from Miss Weber's pen; "The Eye of God," "Shoes," "Saving the Family Name," etc., etc.

3. Proficiency in directing has been attained through the natural artistic sense possessed in such abundance by Miss Weber and her husband. Their united efforts have produced some of the greatest photoplays ever shown upon the screen; "Hypocrites," "Jewel," "Where are My Children?" and the master Bluebird, "Shoes," may be mentioned among the creations of the Smalleys.

4. Mary Mac Laren, the heroine of "Shoes" and "Saving the Family Name" is the leading lady in "Wanted—A Home" and in her third Bluebird the pretty Scotch lassie has an entirely different part than she has ever played; a role bringing to the surface new strata of her abundant talents and artistry.

5. The story of "Wanted—A Home" fixes the position of thousands upon thousands of orphaned girls who must struggle alone against the besetting temptations heedless or actually wanton citizens of the world present in alluring procession. To live rightly, to succeed against adversity and to gain happiness as the victory for fighting a good fight—or else to fall in humiliating defeat. The story of Mina Rogers, the orphan, in "Wanted—A Home," will appeal to every heart.

6. Every individual in the supporting company has been chosen because of the individual player's particular fitness to play the role assigned to them. Nannie Wright, cleverest of character women; Grace Johnson and Marian Sigler, two pretty ingenues; "Kewpie" Morgan, a rotund and wholesome comedian; Chas. Marriott, Ernest Shields, Jack Mulhall and Dana Ong complete an evenly proficient company of artists.

7. In the matter of equipment, where the artificial scenes have been created, no expense has been spared to lend an elaborate fitness to the occasion. In the natural settings some of the most beautiful vistas in California have been caught by the camera and presented to the screen as component parts of the unfolding story.

8. Completeness of detail has ever been the salient point of success in establishing the popularity of Bluebirds. The same lavish expenditure of money, benefitted by experience in producing photoplays, will lend an especially meritorious attractiveness to "Wanted—A Home."

9. Finally, it is a Bluebird; and with Bluebird "The Play's the Thing." Commercial methods have been at last applied to photoplay production, and Bluebird, as an organization, is depending upon its previous production for present success and future prosperity. If it's a Bluebird it must be a good photoplay. If it is not a good photoplay, it cannot be a Bluebird.

"Wanted—A Home" will carry an appeal to all types of theatregoers; for there is a good purpose, set forth effectively in gripping scenes, with the embellishment of numerous scenes that will awaken practically every emotion human nature is heir to—and a good lesson will be presented under the engaging motive of pleasant entertainment.

WHY BUILD A SILO?

To promulgate all the various reasons would fill a large volume.

Briefly stating, there are four fundamental reasons why every farmer whether a producer of beef or dairy cattle should build a Silo.

FIRST—The silo is the medium through which a highly palatable, succulent food is produced for winter consumption. Fed along with alfalfa and a small amount of grain it makes a balanced ration. Silage not only promotes health but also stimulates the appetite and aids digestion.

SECOND—A silo insures you proper feed for the summer months when the pastures dry up, thereby avoiding the check of growth in beef animals and the flow of milk in dairy cows.

THIRD—Insures high food value per cubic foot, therefore, one of the cheapest methods known for storing feed. All the digester in curing is practically saved, besides less labor in storing and feeding.

FOURTH—A silo frequently saves a crop which otherwise might be damaged or a total loss. Rains often come at a time when it would be impossible to save an early cutting of alfalfa, clover, oats, peas, or grasses, or an early frost may nip the corn. You can put any crop in the silo whatever the weather conditions are.

Any green crop properly ensiled will furnish a succulent food very beneficial to all farm animals, but throughout the United States, dairymen concede corn silage to be the greatest stimulant for milk production known. Beef producers are not skeptical in pronouncing silage one of their most important feeds.
