Little Eve has always been the companion of her father who with his friend John Elbertson roams the face of the earth in search of rare botanical specimens. Eve has never known her mother and has been reared by her father in the studios atmosphere of the scientist, without any thought of love or anything approaching affection having entered her life.

Shortly after the play begins, her father decides she shall marry his friend, who is a man many years Eve's senior. The girl accepts the dictum as a matter of course. At this time they are in the heart of South Africa following their scientific pursuits. A native runner brings cabled information that there will be at Los Angeles, California, a meeting of botanists, and the two men decide that they will attend. Eve, of course, going along as part of the traveling equipment.

James Barton, a young man of wealth and highly flirtatious disposition, has grown tired of New York society and decides to shift the scene of his activities to Los Angeles. Shortly after he arrives there, the attention of the hotel guests is divided between his escapades with every pretty girl in sight, and the strange gathering of delegates to the convention.

Little Eve Edgerton has attracted considerable attention from the guests because, being a rather pretty girl, she remains hobnobbing with the botanists. Dressed very plainly and unattractively, her big bow spectacles make her noticeable upon the verandas and in the rotunda of the fashionable resort hotel.

Barton has a cousin who has set her heart upon the young man marrying her friend, Miss Van Eaton. This cousin is inclined to play pranks upon Barton, and when she introduces Barton to Eve Edgerton, the courtesies are extended more as a joke than anything else. But as in many cases, this joke did not work out as intended.

Barton takes a sudden interest in the little botanist and the flirtatious young man finds much to attract him in the quaint and unusual personality of the little student. They indulge in horseback rides and gradually become better acquainted.

On one occasion, while they have ridden their horses to the top of a mountain, a violent electric storm comes upon them and during the outbursts Barton is struck by lightning. Eve half drags and half carries him to a cave and by scientific methods of massage she restores him from the shock.

Here in the cave the senior Edgerton and his friend Elbertson accidentally discover the young people and then it is that the minds of scientists are opened to the fact that youth courts youth and age is out of the running. We are left to believe that ultimately the young people will enter a new life in partnership.

There is the direct telling of a simple story, never complicated. The photoplay, "Little Eve Edgerton," will be exhibited in the Bluebird series at the Star Theatre on Saturday, April 7th.

"Wars' Women" is Powerful Photoplay Coming to the Star.

"Wars' Women" is a powerful photoplay which is coming to the Star theatre Tuesday, April 10th. It is a cinema protest to civilization against the violation of women in time of war. Frank Keenan and Enid Markey take the leading roles in the plot around which this photoplay with a purpose has been written.

The play primarily teaches us that we must prepare to protect our mothers and sweethearts from the ravages of war. The picture is well timed. The situations shown are those which might arise in any country at war.

TWICE PROVEN

If you suffer backache, sleepless nights, tired, dull days and distressing urinary disorders, don't experiment. Read this twice-told testimony. It's Heppner evidence—doubly proven.

J. H. Cox, carpenter, Baltimore St., Heppner, says: "It seems that if I catch the least cold, I suffer much from pain in my back. I have seen the time that I simply couldn't go and had to stay in bed for a week or ten days. I have used a great many medicines, but I can say that Doan's Kidney Pills have done me more good than anything. I haven't been bothered now for quite awhile."

The above statement was given April 8, 1916, and on May 11, 1916, Mr. Cox said: "It has been a long time since I have had any occasion to take a kidney medicine. I still consider Doan's Kidney Pills a good, reliable medicine for backache and kidney disorders."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Cox had. Poster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.
