WOULD RAISE GOATS IN MORROW COUNTY

Oklahoma Man Can See Great Opportunity in Stubble and Weed Summerfallow.

To the Editor The Gazette-Times:— I wish to write a word or two to the men around here who will have summer fallow and stubble fields this summer. I am here fresh from Oklahoma and want to try to take up something here that will make me an honest dollar. At present I feel like during the fall months after wheat is cut I could run a bunch of goats by herding them on some of your stubble and weed summerfallow.

So now think a little on this idea and if you have 500 to 1000 acres of this sort of land write to me or see me and we will talk the matter over. Some fields will need a little water near by.

I like the climate here. It does not chill a man to death and as to the summer range, I haven't seen any yet as the snow is hanging on later than usual. I want to try and get a little hold here, but don't want to arouse any realtors or put anyone to any bother. I must get some experience as I have but a few bucks to go on.

So in conclusion, I notice where our President wants to know the thoughts of the man around his own Jam Rock. My say is that I hope our President will let his mind lead him to the top of Mt. Hood, far above the Bells of Wealth. For these bells have the chiming we all know. My hopes are that foreign matters will turn for the better and our peace can continue and our President's proclamation can be Peace and Goodwill to all men.

Yours very sincerely,
 J. O. ALLSTOTT.

ECHO SHEARING PLANT BEGAN WORK TUESDAY

With more than 50,000 sheep to be sheared the Jacob Wattenburger shearing crew will start the season's work at the big Echo plant next Tuesday. Twenty-four shearing machines and a full crew of operators will be employed. Between 3000 and 4000 sheep will be handled by the plant daily.

Last week a portion of the plant was moved to Attalia to do some shearing there, but the weather was so bad that nothing could be done and the outfit returned to Echo yesterday. Nearly 15,000 that were to have been clipped at the Attalia setting will be driven to the Echo plant.

Speaking of this plant, Mr. Wattenburger says that there is not another plant in Oregon, Washington or Idaho that will shear 80,000 sheep this spring. The Echo plant is not only the best equipped of any shearing plant in the northwest, but it handles more sheep than any other. About a month will be required to complete the work here. Bad weather may lengthen this time a little, and the work will be slowed down somewhat by the sandy wool caused by the hard wind storms of the past month.—Echo News.

Topic for the morning sermon, "The Fourth Commandment." In the evening a series of vespertine views will be given illustrating the life of Christ and appropriate to the Easter season. While these views have been selected especially for the benefit of Sunday School children we believe they will be of interest to older people also. A cordial invitation to all.

Silas Harris came down from his mountain home in the vicinity of Parkers Mill Monday. He reports lots of water running at random as a result of the melting snow. Roads are in a very bad condition as a result, according to Mr. Harris.

Ray Halferty left Tuesday morning for Portland where he expects to join the navy. Mr. Halferty has been working for H. J. Biddle for some time and as much as he is needed on the farm, Mr. Biddle is glad to see him stand by his country and go as a volunteer.
