POISONOUS SPIDERS KILL HUNDREDS YEARLY

Deadly Tarantula Scourge of Tropical Countries.

"The Tarantula," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature to be shown at the Star theatre, on Sunday and Monday is well named. The title role of the story is played by one of the large spiders which are so feared in tropical countries.

The disease tarantism has been attributed to this species of the spider although no authentic proof of this fact has ever been secured.

Unlike most of his kind, the tarantula weaves no web in which to ensnare his prey, but seeks it like other larger animals. His home is a hole burrowed in the ground with a silky lining in order to protect himself from being hemmed in by pieces of falling earth.

These spiders, which are about the size of a walnut, are the scourge of the countries in which they are found and their bites have been fatal in a great many instances. The poison glands are concealed in the lower region of the head from where the fangs protrude.

It is said that the only cure for the bite of a tarantula is dancing or some similar violent exercise, which will exhaust the victim and cause them to perspire. In this way the poison leaves the system and their chances of recovery increase accordingly.

Rescued from the streets of St. Petersburg, educated in a convent and then taken into the home of her benefactress, Katrina Vlasoff rewarded her good Samaritan by treacherously winning the love of the woman's husband; by conspiring with the faithless swain to exterminate the wife that the two plotters might share her fortune and live luxuriantly in their illicit love. When they presumed that they had succeeded and were enjoying their time of triumph, fate played an uncommon trick--and they were made to pay full penalty. This, in a nutshell, is the story of "The Reward of the Faithless," to be presented in Bluebird photoplays at the Star theatre on Friday and Saturday with Wedgewood Nowell and Betty Schade playing the leading characters. The production was created by Rex Ingram, who also gave to Bluebirds "The Challenge of Sorrow" and "Black Orchids"--a brace of photoplays conspicuous for their artistic reflections and photographic beauties.

WOULD ORGANIZE CRATER LAKE CLUB

The following letter has been received by Secretary Smead of the Heppner Commercial Club from Mark Woodruff, secretary in charge of publicity and conventions, Portland Chamber of Commerce.

Portland, Oregon, Aug. 1, 1917. Secretary Commercial Club, Heppner, Oregon.

Dear Mr. Secretary:

For lack of nourishment a great Oregon asset is literally dying on our hands.

We can save it if we will, and it can be made a revenue producer for every city, town and village in the state.

I am talking about Crater Lake. Crater Lake is one of the world's marvelous freaks of nature, and it is invested with a beauty and grandeur that is almost overpowering to the beholder. Crater Lake is big enough to pull travelers around the world to visit it. These tourists scatter money along every trail.

But they are not coming as they should. Neither are Oregon people going to the lake as they should.

Therefore we suggest that every Oregon Commercial Club or Chamber of Commerce organize a "Crater Lake Club" and immediately sign up members to visit the lake this year by auto or train and stage line. Organize parties to go both ways.

Every visitor will be glad he made the trip, and glad to boost for Crater Lake in the future.

Then follow up the visit by having each person send out at least 100 picture post cards to friends, writing on the card something like the following:

"I was there. Crater Lake is the most marvelous sight in America. Good hotel there now."

Will you organize such a club?

Will you do it this week?

Will you write me about this as soon as possible? I will send you printed matter about the lake if it will help you.

There is a fine hotel there, well managed, at from $2.50 to $4.50 per day American plan. Tent camp facilities can be had much cheaper. Special rates will be made for parties. A good auto road runs to the lake, and an auto stage meets trains at Medford and Klamath Falls. The fare for the round trip from Medford is $12.50. The same from Klamath.

Sincerely yours,

MARK WOODRUFF,

Assistant Secretary in Charge, Bureau of Publicity and Conventions.
