W. W. Smead is New Mayor.

At an adjourned meeting of the City Council, held on Monday evening for the purpose of choosing a successor to S. E. Notson as mayor, W. W. Smead was elected to serve for the coming year. As stated in last issue, Mr. Notson had resigned the position and it was now up to the Council to find a successor. Mr. Smead was mayor of Heppner for two years and is well acquainted with the duties of the office and learned well the task of drawing his salary. We do not know just what promises he has made, if any, or what policies he will attempt to carry out, but safe to say Mr. Smead will be faithful in the performance of his duties and there will be no chasing of the wild goose. Other matters of business were passed over to the regular meeting, with the exception of the payment into the library fund of fifty dollars, and the signing of the warrant for this was the last official act of Mayor Notson.

Frank H. Robinson, lone attorney, whose law office was badly 'scorched' in the recent fire, spent several days in Portland on business during the past week.

Sam E. VanVactor, local attorney, spent a few days at Portland and Goldendale during the past week. Mr. VanVactor's father lives at Goldendale and is getting well along in years, having passed the three score and ten mark more than ten years ago.

M. D. Clark, Frank Gilliam and Geo. J. Currin, leading Masons of Heppner, departed for Portland yesterday morning and will attend the meetings of the Scottish Rite Masons being held in the metropolis.

J. A. Troedson and Ole Johnson were visitors in Heppner from Morgan Tuesday. Mr. Johnson was here to take his examination before the local draft board and Mr. Troedson acted as a witness for him.

Greenwood Thornton and Andy Rood went to Portland Saturday. While in the city, Mr. Rood will be initiated into the Shriners of Scottish Rites Mason.

John Vaughn returned home Friday from a visit of several days in Portland, where he had been called on business.

OREGON MAN ON PLANT DISEASE CONTROL BOARD

H. P. Barss, an O. A. C. Scientist, Named as Western Member of National War Committee.

Corvallis, Ore., Jan. 16.—An Oregon man has won a place on the Plant Pathologist War Board, a national organization formed to increase food production by reducing the heavy losses due to plant diseases. At the recent meeting of plant pathologists at Pittsburg, Prof. H. P. Barss was named as the western member of the Plant Pathologists War Board, being the only representative west of the Mississippi valley.

The Board has undertaken a nation-wide campaign to reduce the enormous losses to the principal crops by plant diseases. Federal aid will be sought for each of the states in pushing the campaign. The annual loss in Oregon from plant diseases alone is six to ten million dollars.

Prof. Barss is getting together information on the crop losses in Oregon and the other western states to present to the Government, in order that a correct idea of the annual damage may impress congress with the need of help in this work as part of the plan to increase food production during the war.

All citizens of Oregon who are in possession of information as to crop damage from diseases are requested by Prof. Barss to send a statement of the same to him at Corvallis, care of the Oregon Agricultural College. The work is already under way, and the information sought has been reported from some parts of the State.

All county agricultural agents and home demonstration agents of Oregon have been in session all week at Corvallis, to plan and coordinate the work of promoting the agricultural interests of the counties they represent. Paul V. Maris, state leader, and L. R. Simons, agriculturist of the U. S. States Relations Service, are in conference with the agents, bringing the work into the closest possible relation with that of Federal Government in increasing food production and saving.

"LET MACHINERY DO IT" NEW SLOGAN FOR FARMER

Labor Shortage Calls for Much Wider Use of Improved Farm Machinery on Oregon Farms.

Corvallis, Ore., Jan. 15.—It's always handy to have some one or something to pass the buck to in time of trouble, and farm machinery is looked to as the goat by go-ahead farmers in many parts of Oregon. Bigger crops than ever before with scarcer and higher priced labor than ever before quite evidently can be raised in no other way.

Tractors for plowing and harrowing, combines for harvesting and threshing the grain crops, and bulk elevators for handling the grain, are the types most counted on for doing the work of the farm help called to the trenches or other lines of service. Milking machines are also being introduced in large numbers into the dairy districts of the State.

Farm tractor dealers put 21 tractors, big and little, into the Farmers Week demonstrations at the College, to give farmers a chance to see and study them and pick out the ones best suited to their uses. This indicates the strength of the demand they expect. The College farm mechanics department is conducting a four-week tractor course, to train farmers and farm help in using and caring for the big machines.

If the farmers would all double their poultry production, every family in the United States could be eating poultry two or three times a week and eggs every day, says Prof. Dryden of O. A. C., and enough red meat would be saved to make up the meat shortage to every one of the ten million allied soldiers fighting for the country. Not all farmers could make a profit, but many could, and patriotism may be sufficient reward, anyhow.

Rev. George B. VanWaters, Episcopal missionary, held services for his church in Heppner on Sunday last, preaching at the church both morning and evening.

SAVE THE WHEAT

By What You Eat

THE United States Food Conservation Commission asks you to make your fight for democracy by saving certain food-stuffs for our soldiers in the trenches.

Food Will Win the War The Greatest of these Foods is Wheat

Eat less wheat by substituting with rye, graham and corn meal. Eat more cereals of the wheatless nature, such as corn flakes, rolled oats and cream of barley.
