Y. M. C. A. ADOPTS A FRENCH FAMILY

How a division of American soldiers in France played raven to the Elijah of a family of starving French refugees, found covering in the attic of an old meat market, and how Elijah, in turn, made the ravens comfortable, is told in this story, written by a Y. M. C. A. war work secretary in France:

"A division of our troops were on the move. For thirty-eight hours the men had been on the cars. Then had detrained, and started to hike for the front. Two days of marching had left them stiff and tired.

"The Y. M. C. A. men had gone ahead of them. They knew that the troops would be in a certain village by a certain time. So they loaded three big trucks with canteen supplies, hustled to the village, and looked around for a canteen.

"They found an old meat market with the shutters up, located the owner, and got the key. The supplies were unloaded, and the trucks started back to town. The two men left behind to 'open up' lighted a candle, and began an investigation.

"Up the steep stone steps they found a room, with a family of refugees crouched inside. The old fireplace had been opened. A few twigs, the size of a lead pencil, made a fire as big as a coffee cup.

"A mother nursing a baby sat on the floor in front of the fire, two small girls whose eyes seemed unnaturally big in their thin, little faces cowering near her, scared by the steps they had heard. A daughter about fifteen years old was cooking some nondescript bits of food in an old frying pan. The father, a little man, badly crippled in the early battles of the war, started forward, as the strangers approached.

"They spoke no English, and our men spoke no French, but suddenly they understood. These were 'les Americaines!' They would not be hurt. They were going to be fed.

"When the American soldiers came, they found the mother making chocolate for them, while the oldest daughter scrubbed up the old market, humming the 'Marseillaise' as she worked. The two little girls, bursting with impatience, ran on small errands. The baby sat on the canteen counter, chuckling at them.

"As they entered, the crippled little Frenchman, busy opening packing cases, straightened himself as well as he could, and saluted them. There was pride in the way he did it. He had worn a uniform, too.

"The American boys adopted the family, at once. The Y. M. C. A. men had fed the refugees, of course, but the soldiers insisted upon buying them more food in the canteen. They tossed the baby in the air, and began teaching the little girls American slang.

"That night there was a real fire in the fireplace upstairs, and real food on the table. Windows, boarded up so long, were open. The family chattered away at the top of their voices, instead of whispering, as they had done. There was nothing to be afraid of now.

"'Les Americaines' has come!" Sam Turner arrived home from the Mare Island Navy yard Friday on a 30-day furlough. Sam looks fine and states that he is enjoying the training he is receiving. He expects to get right into the harness in the harvest fields at the Turner ranch in Sand Hollow and work off some of his surplus flesh.

Nation Now Calls on All Patriots

By HAPSBURG LIEBE of the Vigilantes.

THIS is the story of Cecie Fourth, the Day that is the American year's badge of Independence and Liberty, the Day that should mean to us much the same as a real Christmas—and the Day that too many of us have heretofore dragged through the cheap mire of loud noises and spread-eagles! And now we stand in no small danger of losing forever the glorious old Fourth to the Prussian legions. It is a fact, and not a calamity howl. I tell you, it is a fact.

We have three distinct classes of Fourth Observers in this big and good-natured, easy-going, still half-asleep nation of ours. There is the class that drowns the day away; the class that spends the Day either in joyriding or in making great noises; and the class that looks upon the Fourth as the sacred day it is. It was this latter-named class that made the Fourth; is keeping the Fourth; and will continue to keep the Fourth, God willing. If these patriots can only get the help of all the people we shall keep the Day of Independence as long as time lasts.

We do stand in danger of losing this Day and all it means, I tell you most solemnly. The distance between us and Prussia has given us a false feeling of security. Man, there is no distance now! Germany is at our elbows. Germany is right here with cunning spies and incendiaries, and cut-throat propagandists. Let me state this to you, brother American; there are men of no small importance in things, here in the United States, who are secretly working for Germany in the stout belief that Germany will win in the end. Foolish, you say? Unspeaking, insufferable, perhaps; but hardly foolish. Germany is not yet whipped in Europe. If Germany finally wins in Europe; if Germany breaks and rolls up the allied lines—that which will follow will surely take your breath away. Never, never was there dreamed of such a colossal reign of horror as that which would follow a final Prussian victory in Europe.

Man, man, we mustn't lose our Fourth. It is our most sacred heritage; we must keep it and all it stands for, though the last drop of our blood goes to pay the price. We can keep it, if only we wake to the great necessity that confronts us now. If we lose it, it will be the fault of the slackers among us. Our biggest difficulty is that wooden-headed, unfounded confidence we've got in George—in leaving it to the other fellow. Don't for a minute think we've got only a "bit" to do; no; we must do all we can!

Generally speaking, we've been mildly patriotic so far. The average person of us has really given little, has suffered little save the inconvenience caused by food and fuel situations. We must back up the army and navy, through our government, better than we have been doing. Remember, poor George can't possibly do all there is to do! If we don't help George, the other fellow, George is going into the hands of the Black Beast of Kultur. And if we don't help George, it would serve us right if the Spiked Helmet did get us—but wouldn't it be hell for George? Poor old George. God bless that patriotic, overburdened man. Let's help him, you and I; let's keep the Fourth as our own Day of Independence. I can imagine no greater remorse of conscience than to look backward, after these bitter years that be upon us now, and have to say to myself this:

"This Liberty is not mine. I did nothing to help. Nothing. Nothing." God save the Fourth of July, and make it immortal! God must save it for us if only all the people will help Him and George. We pay for what we get. It is the oldest law. If Liberty is ours, we must pay for it.
