PENDLETON YOUTH DIES FROM BULLET WOUND

The city suffered a severe shock today when it was learned that Harlan Fell, the 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Fell, died from a bullet wound in his head last night. The deceased lad was one of the best known and well liked boys of his clique and the news spread over the city like wild fire and brought a universal feeling of grief everywhere. The tragedy occurred in the Fee gulch, a mile east from the central part of Pendleton.

As nearly as can be learned Harlan Fell and Miss Elva Kupers, a young lady with whom he had been keeping company for several months and to whom it was said he was engaged to be married, went out for a short ride, and while sitting in the car alongside the road talking, the conversation turned in such a manner that led to the commonly called "lover's quarrel." During the course of the talk, Mr. Fell chanced to grasp a Colt 32 automatic revolver in his pocket, which he had been cleaning just before starting for the drive, and he pulled this out and threatened to shoot himself. Miss Kupers caught the revolver—jerked it from his hand and threw it as far as she could up the hillside. Mr. Fell jumped out of the car and ran and picked up the gun and on his way back to the car put the gun to his head and the weapon was discharged.

He fell to the ground and Miss Kupers ran from the car, ran back to the city, a distance of almost a mile, and reported the matter to the sheriff. He at once notified the coroner, J. T. Brown, who went to the scene, accompanied by J. H. Kavanaugh, city health officer, and Night Officer Charles Myers.

On reaching the scene they found the boy still alive and putting him in the car, brought him to the hospital and the parents having been notified, Mr. Fell was present with his son when he passed away, perhaps an hour after the fatal shot had been fired, though the boy never regained consciousness, dying about 9:30 last night.

While there are some features to the sad accident that would seem to support an inference of suicide, the general opinion of all who knew him are firmly convinced that he had no intention of injuring himself or any one else and that the trigger was pulled entirely involuntarily, perhaps having stumbled or otherwise tightened his hold as he was walking back to the car.

The coroner did not find it necessary to hold an inquest as the facts of the matter were entirely too apparent to need any court proofs.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Church of the Redeemer, the Rev. Alfred Lockwood, officiating. Fellow high school students will serve as pallbearers.—Pendleton Tribune

FOREST NOTES.

Most forest fires are due to ignorance, carelessness, or maliciousness.

Lookout men, whose sole business is to detect and report forest fires, live on many of the high peaks of Oregon and Washington during the dry season and have within their range of vision most of the timberland of these two states.

The Forest Service maintains 4,350 miles of trail in Oregon, and 4,500 miles in Washington for fire protective purposes.

A Forest Service standard lookout house will be placed on the summit of Mount Adams about August 1. The ready-cut material is now being transported over the last 10,000 feet of the ascent. When in position this will be the highest forest-fire lookout house in the country.

The net receipts from the National Forests of Oregon, Washington, and Alaska for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, were $633,700.30. On the eleven forests of the district the receipts were greater than the costs of administration. In amount of receipts from all sources, the Whitman National Forest led the district with $97,668.61. The Touzass with $86,619.74 and the Crater with $85,025.67 stood second and third respectively.

According to foresters, most of the annual loss from forest fires might be prevented by a little care on the part of everyone using fire in the woods. "Be sure your fire is out before you leave," is good advice and not hard to take.

American soldiers engaged in the French forests write, "There have been no fires in these forests for years."

The hazel hoe is considered by forest-fire fighters as the best single tool for digging fire line or trench. It is a strong broad-bladed hoe suitable for cutting weeds and small brush as well as digging in the soil.
