AS TO HOW THE AMERICANS FIGHT

(Spokesman Review.)

It is now possible to arrange an interesting symposium of opinions about the worth of the American soldiers at the front. So very much depends on these men that for a long time the whole world was anxious to know whether they could really fight. Not the least anxious was Berlin, for good and sufficient reasons. Berlin found out. After German soldiers had encountered sawed-off shotguns, which were Pershing's own idea, the Berlin papers exclaimed in horror that undoubtedly the next American weapons would be the original scalping knife and tomahawk. Quite possible, but never mind that now.

The French and English have lately gone on record as to how our men impress them from a fighting point of view. A Red Cross woman in Paris asked a newly wounded poilu his opinion of the Americans. He was a taciturn poilu, and all he said was: "His no cedent pas"—they don't give ground. That was when we were doing defensive work only.

After the July 4 attack at Hammel, where Americans and Australians went over together somebody put the question to an American captain. "Fine fighters," he said, "but a bit rough." And in the British armies the Australians enjoy the reputation of being the roughest fighters on the western front.

One German intelligence officer reported: "They kill or are killed." Not quite such fools as that, but they do show a strong aversion to remaining as captives in the enemy's hands. Last week, in the heavy fighting on the Marne, various small groups of Americans were cut off and captured. One corporal was sent back across the river in a small boat, guarded by two Germans. He rocked the boat, drowned the Germans and swam back to safety. Seven others were started along the same route. Their commander knocked one German guard down with a stick of wood and his men disarmed the others and swam back under fire. Three privates killed their captors with bare hands. Sergeant J. E. Brown, with 11 men, was cut off from the American lines and was in a forest occupied entirely by Germans. Later in the day he and his 11 showed up inside their own lines with 155 prisoners.

The Germans disapprove of these tactics. They are not according to Hoyle. And one can not blame them for their opinion that men who fight so peculiarly are likely to take to outlandish weapons like tomahawks.

More Than 6,200 Field Workers.

More than 6,200 county agent workers—6,216, to be exact—were at work July 1 in the United States carrying out the food production and conservation program, according to a report recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. Of this number the greatest percentage are in emergency work helping the great land army to produce food for this Nation and our allies. There are 2,011 in the emergency county agent work, 1,617 in the home demonstration work, and 1,020 in the boys' and girls' club work. In the 33 northern and western States there are 1,596 county agent workers, of which 142 are and emergency work. In the southern States there are 1,495 county agent workers, of which 142 are colored local agents. There are a total of 893 home demonstration workers in the North and West and 1,231 in the South. In the boys' and girls' club work 1,096 men and women are employed in the northern and western States and 85 in the southern States.

Sheep On Idle Cut-Over Lands.

Cut-over lands in parts of Minnesota, Michigan, West Virginia, Louisiana, and other States which have heretofore been idle, are now being utilized for grazing sheep and are thus being made to do what they can to contribute to the Nation's food supply. Sheep extension specialists of the Department of Agriculture are cooperating with departments of agricultural extension in 12 States. Sheep raisers have been aided in securing sheep from western ranges.

Oregon Military Police on Duty.

A squad of the Oregon Military Police, consisting of Sergeant C. Lillie, Corporal H. J. Cummings, and Privates L. F. Brown, Thomas E. Riggs and L. M. Shadley, arrived in Heppner the last of the week from Pendleton and will be on duty here the balance of the harvest season. These men are subject to call, night or day, and will assist in keeping down any trouble of any nature that may arise, either in town or country. They will patrol the farming section and look out for fire bugs and I. W. W. agitators and will co-operate with the local authorities in all possible ways. At present the squad is billeted at the high school building, where they occupy the domestic science department kitchen. Sergeant Lillie would like to get in touch with anyone who is willing to furnish his boys with riding horses, and would ask that he be informed at Heppner of riding animals that are available for their patrol work. Some have already been secured but others are needed.

The popular new way to put the mortgage on the farm is the tractor. The farmer will give notes for a hundred to a thousand that draw interest. In the meantime the horses become useless and eat their heads off. The horse market is destroyed and the brood mares that used to earn fifty dollars a year raising colts will be sold to the soap factory to buy gasoline, while the family grows discontented looking at their neighbors new touring car.
