Minor Musings

There is as much need for honest friendship in the world as for love and it's usually less expensive.
 If you are easily insulted, an insult awaits you on every corner.
 The best way for you to promote your enemy's cause is to attack him unfairly.
 Never mind misstatements about yourself so long as whoever makes them does not start in to tell the truth about you.
 One who tackles a disagreeable job and gets it over with as quickly as possible soon will find himself the "goat" for as many more disagreeable jobs as others can put upon him.
 The working shirker is the worst. He can always hold up his semblance of work to you when you accuse him of idling, and he's hard to disprove.
 Be good and you'll make people

It's easier to do good than to be good.
 A soda grabber is a joy stabber.
 Who has only inspiration for a guide wanders far from the path.
 One who takes no thought of the morrow always is pleasanter company than one who takes all thought of the morrow.
 Some men conquer the world as others conquer a lion—by looking it straight in the eye and cracking a whip.
 Everybody knows what's the matter with you but not what's the matter with himself.
 The memory of an injury is long, of a favor short.
 Don't mistake bustle for haste.
 If you've reached the stage where your day of work seems long, one of four things is the matter with you: you're lazy, you're sick, you're old or you ought to be on another job.
 It is fine, no doubt, to be famous, but you can't trade your fame to the grocer for his goods.
 A flashing wit is not necessarily a cashing wit.
 "Full many a gem of purest ray serene" is bought on the installment plan.
 If you are so worried about something that you can't get it off your mind, it proves that at least you have a mind.
 A woman whose tears irritate instead of command, would better change weapons.
 Notwithstanding the romantic novelists, more people are in need of food than love.
 Lots of times when you think the world is about to come to an end, it's only just beginning.
Why Not Whitman?
 Soon the boys will come marching home. We are planning big celebrations; we shall have feasts and parades and bands and singing. Our gratitude for their service and our patriotism will be genuine and glowing.
 But some boys will not come home. Some of our heroes have been called upon to die for us and for the country they and we love. Mothers and fathers, wives and sweethearts will shed tears while the joyous procession passes. For them particularly the bitter will be mingled with the sweet.
 What shall be done for the men whose stars are gold? What memorial shall we raise for them?
 Shall we not create a living memorial dedicated to the perfection of the civilization for which these men have shed their blood and our women their tears? To establish new standards of value in our judgments of what makes life worth living, finer traditions of co-operation and kindly fellowship between class and class and between man and man?
 Already several million have been given to universities and colleges. The income of these sums is to be used to pay the college expenses in whole or in part of soldiers of this war and of their children and of their descendants. For this purpose the University of Chicago has received one gift from Mr. Laverne Noyes of $2,500,000.
 Mr. Laverne Noyes chose the University of Chicago to handle the money that thus expresses his gratitude. Is his act worth our consideration as citizens of Walla Walla? Shall we choose Whitman college?
 Is it not fitting that the institution founded to commemorate the name of the martyred patriot, Marcus Whitman, should be used to keep alive to remote generations the memory of the names of the sons who crossed seas to give their lives in defense of the flag?—Walla Walla Bulletin.

DEVELOPING EAGLE'S WINGS, HIS JOB

The air forces will be one of the most important branches of the national defense of any nation in the future. Therefore America seems particularly fortunate in its new commander, Maj. Gen. Charles T. Menoher, who is now in charge of the air forces of the United States. General Menoher made a great record,
