Men May Enlist in Infantry for Period of Three Years.—360 Men Are Wanted By War Department.

Young men who have long desired to see Alaska and become better acquainted with the big opportunities which that country in the north affords, now have the opportunity by enlisting for immediate service in the United States Army.

According to an announcement recently issued by the war department at Washington, men enlist for this service for a period of three years though discharge may be requested after one year of service.

Upon enlistment, men enlisted for service in Alaska will be sent to Vancouver Barracks, Washington, for assignment to the 21st Infantry which is scheduled to leave for Alaska on or about June 30, 1919.

Contrary to the general belief, Alaska is not a land of snow and ice, but in many sections the mild climate that prevails in the lower sections of the Northwest will be found. The United States government is spending millions of dollars every year in the development of its northern possession and there are countless opportunities there for men who have a desire to make money.
