BAKER BLOCKED EFFORT AT ARMY COURT REFORM

Lieutenant Colonel Who Stood for Justice for Men Quits Military Service.

Washington, July 6.—Lieutenant Colonel Samuel T. Ansell, former Acting Judge Advocate General of the Army, who has made a great fight to have the rules with regard to trials by court-martial reformed, has handed his resignation to Secretary Baker. In the movement to make the court-martial procedure of the army more liberal and enlightened, Lieutenant Colonel Ansell has been a prominent figure. His efforts have to a large extent been blocked by Secretary Baker and high officers of the Judge Advocate's department.

The work of Lieutenant Colonel Ansell, however, has not been without important results. A number of members of Congress are determined to force an overhauling of the law with relation to courts-martial.

A Governor Visits Women Land Army Workers

They said the women's Land Army of war time was a fad. Here is just a part of the 1919 crew in mid-season with their "trick clothes" showing effects of sun, rain and weather of a busy season. This picture was taken at Ulster County, New York, as the farmerettes knocked off for a day to entertain Governor and Mrs. Alfred Smith of that state. Gov. Smith is testing spring water from the old pump. The farmerettes will have a bumper crop on this farm this year.

Wrights Once Oregonians.

Marshfield—It is not generally known that Orville and Wilbur Wright, inventors of the heavier than air machines, were for several years residents of Oregon, but this state can lay claim to some of the honors the Wright boys acquired. Their father, Rev. Mr. Wright, of the United Brethren church, and afterwards bishop at Denver, traveled Oregon for a number of years doing itinerant preaching at homes, in school houses and public buildings before churches were common. The Reverend Mr. Wright and his family resided at Selo when he was preaching in Oregon.

"Withycombe Day" Is Set.

Salem, Ore.—Members of the State Fair board, acting upon the suggestion of Governor O'Leary, today designated Sept. 22, the first day of the 1919 fair, as Withycombe day, in honor of the late Governor Withycombe.

"Perhaps no man has been a greater factor in the development of agriculture and livestock in the state than the late Governor Withycombe," said Governor O'Leary in his letter to the board, "and it would seem fitting that the state, through its fair, offer some such tribute to the work which he accomplished along these lines. Oregon has made a wonderful advance in the products of field and farm, as well as in its pure-bred stock which has gained international fame. Much of this advancement has been due to the persistent and untiring efforts of the late Governor Withycombe."

His record shows that on August 1, 1919, there had been issued 75,193 auto licenses and temporary licenses. The last license issued in 1918 was No. 63,325.
