

ALL HUMANITY MUCH ALIKE

Only in Early Life Does the Average Man Imagine He is Different From Others.

Some of the great discoveries that come to us as we advance in life is the fact that deep down in the human heart all men are alike. In very life we think we are different from the rest of the world, but as years go by we find that this is not so, that other men have the same hopes and aspirations, the same troubles and anxieties, the same yearnings after happiness and peace. We learn this from our friends, from those who tell us their troubles and ask for sympathy and advice. Then we learn it from books; from the words of great poets and writers, and especially from biographies and autobiographies.

As a child I was sensitive and shy, and felt that I was peculiar in this respect, and different from the others, who always seemed to take the world for granted. And yet I have discovered that this is the universal lot of all men. G. Stanley Hall speaks of a "newly revealed and grave danger that works countless tragedies in life—that the child's feelings of inferiority should become dominant and make him feel in his earliest years that he is condemned to a low level of existence, without respect, appreciation, admiration or love." Thus the chronic teaser or hector may do great mischief to the tender soul of the child. The child is always asking himself subconsciously, "Do I look worse or better than others?"

This tendency lasts with most men all their lives. We are all the time comparing our lot with that of others. As Emerson says: "Every ship looks romantic except the one we are on," and again, "Every man's life seems to him covered with the slime of failure and defeat, while that of others seems ideal." It is a great help to know that men are alike in this respect. I could give a long list of well-known men and women who suffered from this sense of inferiority, incapacity and defeat, followed by moods of gloom and melancholy—men like Tennyson, Ruskin, Lowell, Symonds, John Stuart Mill, and, in our own day, Rudyard Kipling, Richard Harding Davis and others.—Exchange.

Solid Heat.

Another of the problems that our army in France disposed of in a practical way was the supplying of fuel for heating and cooking purposes in the trenches. Solidified alcohol filled the bill because it was safe, convenient to handle and burned without odor or smoke. As a result of the demand, huge factories were built to produce this novel fuel. Now new uses must be found for the vast output of solidified alcohol.

Mr. L. Popper of New York city, who made its use of such practical value by inventions such as the mess kit stove, airplane food carrier, dug-out heater and various other devices, has again come to our rescue by inventing a special kind of portable stove, ideal for picnics, camping, boating and other outdoor excursions. The stove is made in the form of a suitcase of heavy steel and is provided with a hinged drop which forms the front of the stove when it is erected. Folding feet beneath the stove serve to raise it an inch or so above the surface on which it may be placed. The fuel is supplied in the form of cans, which are placed beneath the burner holes.—Philadelphia North American.

Goldenrod Maligned.

A protest has recently been raised against the time-honored project of adopting the goldenrod as the national flower of the United States, on the ground that this plant is a cause of hay fever and hence nothing ought to be done to encourage its prevalence. A statement now has been issued by Dr. W. Scheppgrell, on behalf of the American Hay-Fever Prevention association. In defense of the goldenrod, it is asserted that while the pollen of the goldenrod may cause trouble when applied directly to the nostrils or used in large quantities for room decorations, as a cause of hay fever out of doors it is absolutely negligible. "It is one of our most beautiful flowers," says Doctor Scheppgrell, "and well merits its selection as the national flower of the United States."—Scientific American.

On Leadin Wings.

Here's another one at the expense of the colored boys who fought in France. Seems a detachment walked square into the center of a German ambulance of machine guns, which without warning broke loose at the rate of several thousand shots a minute.

Simultaneously two colored infantrymen from Dixie started for the Mason-Dixon line. After an hour's hard running one of them looked back.

"Hy dar, nigger," he shouted to his comrade, "look at all them flies a-follin' you!"

"Get out ob mah way, fool!" yelled the other. "Dem ain't flies; dem's bullets!"—Exchange.

Revealing.

According to returned doughboy of fliers, Paris fashions are getting more bold and amazing every day.

"While I was at Monte Carlo," remarked one, "I saw a lovely girl standing with a friend of mine. She had just joined him and was obviously proud of her costume."

"How does my new gown show up?" she purred.

"To the knees," he answered promptly, and rubbed it in by adding, "and what stunning buckles you have on your garters!"

Fine Memorial to Edith Cavell.

In a quarry, midway between Bodmin and Camelford, on the moors of North Cornwall, England, a memorial is being fashioned out of granite in memory of Nurse Cavell. One of the huge pieces is nearing completion under the guidance of Sir George Frampton, who is giving his services free. This figure represents a woman with arms half upraised, holding a little child on her lap, while underneath, on the base of the monument, is carved a cross. The group is symbolical of the stronger nations protecting the smaller and weaker ones, while the cross is the emblem of mercy. The whole group is carved in the form of a cross, giving special significance to the order to which Nurse Cavell belonged. Another huge block of granite near by has a big line carved on it, with head erect and mane bristling. Trampled beneath its feet is a serpent, writhing, but defeated. The total weight of the memorial, when finished, will be about 170 tons, with a height of about 40 feet. The group probably will be erected near the British National gallery.

Patriotic Kansas.

I had looked forward to my first glimpse of France with an almost fanatic eagerness. France—the land of dreams—I had visioned it so often! But my first real sight of it, save for a few harbor lights, was not at all the thrilling experience that I had expected. As we steamed up the river to Bordeaux I stood, with a group of eager watchers, beside the rail, and looked at the fields stretching along the sides of the river. They were very green, even though it was winter time; and though I was almost breathless with the wonder of reaching a promised land, that vivid green was the only thing that I could quite comprehend.

"I never saw grass like that!" I exclaimed stupidly.

One of the men—a newspaper man from the middle West—answered me.

"You ought to see the grass that we grow in Kansas!" he said.—Margaret E. Sangster in the Christian Herald.

Dog Watches for Auto.

Does evolution in the life of animals cause them to take added care in going across a street infested with autos? Some folks say it does. Early in the auto age numerous dogs were killed because they would run out to bark at an auto and, judging the speed by that of a horse-drawn vehicle, they often were run over.

This fact can still be noticed in some country districts, where autos are not plentiful. Close students and lovers of dogs in the city say they have often noticed dogs looking to the left and to the right before they start across a street. Of course, not all of them do, neither do all human beings, but the "thinking" dog does. Watch it for yourself.

Drinks of Colonial Times.

The Historical Society of Pennsylvania early in its career translated into English an account by the Swedish traveler Israel Acrelius of the different sorts of strong drink that were popular hereabouts.

"Mamin" was made of water, sugar and rum, and was the chief stock-in-trade of many a tavernkeeper. "Manathan" was rum, sugar and beer. "Lillibub" was made of milk, wine and sugar. "Titt" was beer, rum and sugar poured on buttered toast.

"Sampson" lived up to the name—a mixture of elder and rum. The ingredients of "sangaree" were wine, water, sugar and nutmeg. When brandy and sugar were added to elder it became "elder royal." "Raw dram" was the title for straight rum.—Philadelphia Ledger.

SHOULD REFER TO THE PAST

Word "Experience" is One That is Frequently Misused Even by Writers of Note.

The meaning and uses of the word experience is discussed in this manner by Archbishop Whately in his well-known work, "Elements of Logic": "This word (experience), in its strict sense applies to what has occurred within a person's own knowledge. Experience in this sense, of course, relates to the past alone. Thus it is that a man knows by experience what sufferings he has undergone in some disease; or, what height the tide reached at a certain time and place.

"More frequently the word is used to denote judgment which is derived from experience in the primary sense, by reasoning from that, in combination. Thus a man may assert, on the ground of experience, that the tide may always be expected, under such circumstances, to rise to such a height. Strictly speaking, this cannot be known by experience, but is a conclusion derived from experience and other data. It is in this sense only that experience can be applied to the future, or, which comes to the same thing, to any general fact."
