METRICS IMPORTANT IN LATIN AMERICA

Washington, D. C.—The question of measure seems to be a very important matter in the Latin-American trade. This is being emphasized here in government circles. Instances multiply where persistence by commercial houses and others in using the present obsolete weights and measures have not only caused embarrassment, but even prevented trade development.

An instance is cited from Lima, Peru, where an American firm which neglected to submit its invoices in metric terms was saved from the cancellation of its entire shipment only after strenuous efforts by the United States commercial attaché at that port.

A bulletin by the Latin-American division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, in discussing the necessity of the metric system in Latin-American trade, says that "the present lack of uniformity in the old weights and measures used in Latin America constitutes one of the chief reasons for the extension of the metric system in that part of the world. The recognized advantages of uniformity and simplicity possessed by the metric system and the impetus already given it in Latin-America by its official adoption, make it the logical successor of the numerous and varying systems that must inevitably yield to definite standards with the expansion of trade and the resulting improvement in communication."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The electric clock system was installed in the high school last week. This clock runs on Edison primary cells and is self winding every hour. There are eight clocks and each one has the same time, being controlled by a master clock. One face was placed in the down stairs hall for the ringing of bells, etc. The hands of the clocks jump every thirty seconds. The master clock will carry twenty secondary clocks. They were installed by Borg-Bohnott & Co. It is planned to install a clock in each one of the grade rooms next year.

The Junior class will serve a St. Valentine breakfast at the school on Friday morning, February 13, at 7:30 o'clock.

The Philomathian literary society held their semester election on Tuesday afternoon and elected the following: president, Herbert Hynd; vice president, Mary Clark; secretary, Florence Cason; treasurer Ruth Huddleston; sergeant-at-arms, Odile Groshen.

The flu condition has improved. Many students who have been absent from classes are with us once more.

Rev. A. L. Thoroughman Passes.
Rep. A. L. Thoroughman, for eight years presiding elder for the inland district of the Methodist Episcopal church South, passed away at Walla Walla Monday night of cancer. He was pastor of the Marpin M. E. church there for four years and for two years presiding elder for the Montana district. Rev. Mr. Thoroughman had made many visits to Heppner while presiding over this district and there are many friends here who mourn his departure. His wife died ten years ago. He leaves two nieces in Spokane and a brother in Portland.
M. R. Ball of Olex is a business visitor in Heppner today. Mr. Ball is a prominent farmer of the Olex section.
