Untreated Wounds Decay.

To prevent decay that may spread to other parts of the tree, the limb of a tree that is blown off or becomes diseased should be sawed off even with the trunk and painted with creosote or tar paint, say the state college horticultural specialists. Some times injuries no larger than the head of a nail under the bark will cause the bark to drop off leaving the wood unprotected. Decay will start from these spots and extend until they endanger the tree. If treated with a coat of creosote or tar, decay is stopped, and the bark will grow smoothly over the wound again.

Too Early Feeding Hurts Chicks.

Don't give the baby chick any feed before 36 to 48 hours after it has hatched say the O. A. C. poultry authorities. No feed is necessary at this time because the chicks have the egg yolk in the abdomen to absorb. If it is not absorbed in the first few days it may never be at all. One of the most frequent causes of death in the 8 to 10 week old chick is the presence of unabsorbed egg yolk in the abdomen.

Farming Plans Pay.

In farming it is as important as in any other business to have a plan of operation for the year and then work to the plan, says the Columbia Farm Bureau News. A good plan is to divide the farm up into plots and indicate the number of acres given over for different crops. Then look over the market reports for the past few years and get an idea of the most profitable crops to grow. It is believed that the staple crop for the next two or three years is sure to bring high prices.

Potato Treatment Best When in Dormant Stage.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, March 23, 1920.—Potato seed should be treated with corrosive sublimate 10 days or two weeks before planting, while still dormant, according to M. B. McKay, associate plant pathologist and potato specialist.

Use four ounces of corrosive sublimate crystals or powder to every 30 gallons of water. Dissolve in about a gallon of hot water in glass or a wooden vessel before dilution. This makes a one to 1000 solution.

Use decreases its strength, to correct which add one half ounce of chemical for every four bushels of potatoes treated for two hours. If a shorter treatment is used, reduce the amount of chemical used proportionately.

Dry the tubers immediately after treatment. Piling them up wet leads to injury. Exposure of the potatoes to the hot sun produces black heart. Disinfect the sacks with corrosive sublimate or formaldehyde and dry before re-sacking.

Corrosive sublimate is better than formaldehyde, as it destroys the spores of two diseases, scab and rhizoctonia.

Rhizoctonia is a fungous disease and one of the most serious tuber troubles.

A three to four year crop rotation is necessary for the control of scab and rhizoctonia, as the organism is always present in the soil to some extent.
