are the pick of the herd. While he is not actively engaged in raising the cattle in the manner that he was once still he has some of the best strains in the Northwest. There are other good livestock breeders in the county, but we should have a lot more. Morrow county could just as well as not claim the enviable position held by Union county as a breeder of pure bred livestock. Let's get into the game. If you had some cattle as fine as Jeff Jones' Shorthorns, you would all be proud of them. He has some good bulls for sale.

Values the Silo

(From Farm Bureau News.)
 "Having a silo means simply that you can feed your cows fresh, green corn all winter long," said C. E. Greaves of Silverdale, who was "branded" at the farm bureau meeting at Port Orchard, Wash., the other day as "the best farmer in Kitsap county." "If I had only six cows on my place I'd have a silo if I had to dig it in the ground, and if you took away the two silos to store 120 tons of silage, I'd sell out the dairy business tomorrow. Learn to cut the stuff at the right time, though; put it in without too much water; and pack it hard. I want three good men inside when I'm filling, and I feel happier if I can get four." Mr. Greaves has had some experience with wheat and vetch ensilage, also, and advised cutting this crop when the upper part of the vetch is still soft, though the lower ones may be hard. At that time the wheat will be just a little out of the milk. Apropos of cow testing, this "best farmer" exclaimed somewhat impatiently: "I can't see for the life of me why people insist on keeping cows which produce four or five gallons of milk when a very little more expense they can keep cows producing eight or nine."

PEAR THRIP CONTROLLED BY MISCIBLE OIL SPRAY

Life History Indicates Time and Character of Attack and Injury to Fruit.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, April 28.—Pear thrips may be controlled by miscible oil sprays applied when the thrips start emerging from the ground in the spring during the pink blossom period of early period, explains A. L. Lovett, professor of entomology at the O. A. C. experiment station.

"The thrip has been doing a small amount of damage during the last two or three years," says Professor Lovett. "Which varied in severity from light disorders when a fair percent of fruit showed a heavy drop to more serious disorders when winter buds on the trees failed to put out at all."

"The adult thrips are a twentieth of an inch long and dark in color. They run with a gliding motion and may be seen in considerable numbers crowded down in the unfolded flower and leaf buds."

"They pass the winter under seven or nine inches of soil and on emerging in the spring swarm up the trees and attack the developing portions. They begin depositing their eggs in the leaf and fruit stems about the time the petals begin to fall. The larvae hatch in from four to five days and soon attack internally the under side of the leaves, calyx of the blossoms and the developing fruits. They reach full size in about 16 days."

"The larvae drop to the soil in June and remain as larvae until early fall, when they transform into the pupae stage. They complete transformation to adults late in September."

FARM BUREAU MARKETING

(From Farm Bureau News.)

We have received a letter from the Jackson County Farm Bureau, asking for a state meeting to consider general Farm Bureau marketing. We anticipate that such a meeting will be called under the direction of the State Farm Bureau, which will probably be organized earlier than at first anticipated. At the present time the proper sphere of Farm Bureau marketing is somewhat in the air. We confess that we are not sure exactly how far we should go. Some Farm Bureaus have gone quite strong. We believe at the present time we will simply say this, that until the State organization shall have evolved plans that more clearly define the proper activities of Farm Bureau marketing, Morrow county Farm Bureau will probably confine itself to the pooling of orders from farmers, in which we are hearty believers. Because by buying in large quantities, by providing the funds necessary to take care of sight drafts attached to shippers orders, the farmer will be able to save himself a very large amount of money. The marketing that has so far been done by the Farm Bureau has been practically along these lines. All together while it may not be generally known, it is nevertheless true, that we have handled between $25,000 and $30,000 worth of cooperative buying through this office. Most of it we believe not in competition with any existing concern. The several dealers in sacks have asked the Farm Bureau to take over the entire sack situation. However, we have not seen fit to do this. Another year if it is mutually agreeable this might be done. We ask that every Farm Bureau member carefully study the marketing situation, the marketing problem, and see if he himself can work out a plan which would be worthy of submission to a meeting to be called later. It is a matter of vital importance we believe, to the farmers of Oregon, and as well the farmers of Morrow county, however there are many dangers concealed, and we should look the matter squarely in the face before taking the leap.

Fine Duroc Hogs

Mr. Chas. Dillabough at Boardman has as fine an assortment of Duroc Jersey hogs that you would care to see. The sire which he has there at present is a splendid individual that will weigh nearly 800 pounds. He comes from a family of sweepstakes record and the sire which has produced the magnificent pigs on his place is a picture; and the pigs themselves are good for sore eyes. Anyone who wishes good Duroc Jersey stock cannot afford to overlook these. He has a fine boar there which he secured from John Wightman, which is just about a year old now, and weighs over 430 pounds. So it seems that there is good stock in various parts of the county. Harry Lander at Sand Hollow has some splendid Essex pigs which will be available for anyone wishing the same. The sire and dam of these pigs were shipped in from Michigan and they are surely fine looking specimens.

Good Beef Cattle

Oscar Minor, who's name is known all over the United States as a breeder of a splendid type of Shorthorn cattle, still has a few head and a few of his bulls are for sale occasionally. These are valuable animals as they
