Sulphur on Alfalfa

The sulphur applied this year to the alfalfa on Willow creek has not given clear results during the first cutting. It is not surprising, however, as it was applied a little bit late. However, the results received by A.

W. Cobb down at Beardman are most gratifying. Mr. Cobb has carried his experiments through with great care and has been most painstaking in seeing that the matter has been thoroughly weighed. Sulphur was applied at the rate of eighty pounds per acre in arch, 1919. The first cutting of alfalfa in 1920 on the treated area was at the rate of 5,300 pounds per acre, on the untreated 4,028, or a gain on the first cutting of 1,272 pounds, or nearly 30 per cent. This is a remarkable showing and we believe that the second cutting will prove up equally well. Further study of the effect of sulphur through the second crop will be necessary and we expect to pay particular attention to this and trust that all our sulphur experimenters will also pay careful attention that we may get everything from this we possibly can.

John Troedson of Morgan had the misfortune to lose a nearly finished barn. It was all painted and nearly ready to use when the wind made a wreck.

The Price of Wheat

Every farmer in the wheat belt is vitally interested in what he is going to secure for his wheat after the long uphill pull through the hard winter and reseeded period. It has been determined that the actual cost of wheat according to the best figures available throughout the United States production is $2.15 per bushel. Whether these figures are right or not we are not prepared to state. The apparent price starts at Portland around $2.47; the world market and the amount of wheat available for consumption during the next eighteen months would justify the highest price in the history of the wheat game. There are three things that work against us: the fact that the farmers need money; and that they have no control over the market situation; the third is that there is a great financial stringency at the present time. The farmers have no control over the financial stringency nor over the marketing of wheat, all that they have to do is raise the wheat. We think the time is pretty close at hand when the farmer will have something to say in the marketing of his wheat and in providing himself with his own harvest money. Here's hoping so at least.

THANKS AND APPRECIATION.

Upon the eve of my departure with my family from Heppner, I want to take this opportunity to thank the many good people of Heppner and Morrow county for their business courtesies and good will. I do not expect ever to find another place in the world where so many big hearted, whole-souled people live. It is with regret that we leave here, after forming the strong friendships and associations of twenty years.

My insurance business has been taken over by J. A. Waters and Gay M. Anderson, men of proved integrity and men whom I know will give you fair treatment, treatment that I would want you to receive in the future as you have in the past. I bespeak for them the best of success and commend them to you for any insurance business that the future may hold.

Respectfully,
C. C. PATTERSON.
