

"Come Out of the Kitchen"

At Star Theater on Friday

Although the requirements of her role in "Come Out of the Kitchen," her latest Paramount photoplay, which will be displayed at the Star theater next Friday, demands that she be ignorant of the art of cooking, Marguerite Clark is a past mistress of the science of cuisine as all who have enjoyed collations prepared by her dainty hands, have substantial reason to know.

Miss Clark has a splendidly equipped kitchen in her New York home and when she is busy with some gastronomic chief d'oeuvre, it is highly indiscreet to ask her to come out of the kitchen until her work is done. But in "Come Out of the Kitchen," Miss Clark is seen as an aristocratic Virginia girl who finds it necessary to assume the role of a cook, but while her accomplishments in this line are nil, she manages to win the love of a rich Northerner, which, after all, proved the best thing she could have done.

The story of the photoplay is a delightful one and it was written by Alice Duer Miller, and pictured by Clara Beranger. Eugene O'Brien heads a capable cast of supporting players.
