An airplane on its way from Pendleton to Portland on Tuesday evidently had engine trouble and was obliged to land about two miles above Cecil on E. Logan's ranch. After attending to their troubles the aviators were soon seen taking the air again and proceeding on their journey.

While wandering along the "Cecil Scenic Highway" a party picked up a small roll of paper and after the readers of the Heppner papers have carefully perused the contents of the roll which we enclose, we question very much if Mr. Harry Cummings would be designated the poet laureate of Morrow county.

Cecil It Is Of Thee.

In the valley of Willow creek Stands Cecil, a little town,
If quiet or rest you go to seek,
This place is of quite renown.

The hills the hamlet enclose,
The meadows are very green,
Very often a strong wind blows,
Most always the blue sky is seen.

The hills are rolling and low,
Dotted with yellow and green,
They form a nearly perfect row,
The best that I have ever seen.

Out in the meadows wide
There are mostly cows and sheep,
There wouldn't you like to hide
And play you were Little Bo Peep?

Cecil has a daily train
And Highway long and wide,
They are always there in shine or rain

If you should want a ride,
In Cecil are many places
This I do surely know,
That there's always sunny faces,
Where we may always go.

Beside the poplars high
Reste the good "Last Camp,"
Where many with a happy sigh
Find there are no lamps.

Long porches round the house do run,
The wide green lawn is there,
Where you may have all kinds of fun
And lose every little care.

North of Cecil a mile or two
Is the little school house of gray,
Where many things the children do
That are not what the teachers say.

Next is the little rail station
Where the village "mayer" awaits,
Surely some one will come on vacation
Or else there'll be some freight.

On Sunday when the train comes by
There are a dozen boys or more
Who bring their horses up and tie,
If no girls arrive—they sure are sore.

The train conductor is often sour
And seldom has a smile,
How does he spend the weary hours
On all the dusty miles?

There is a postoffice too, where we receive our mail,
And a postmaster always jolly, hearty and hale,
All at once he comes out with a hustle,
"The train is coming I heard it whistle."

Next is the busiest place of all,
That is the village store,
Above that is the Cecil Hall
Where they always yell for more.

In the evening here the men all meet
And have their little gossip club,
Each one quickly takes his seat
And then begins the big hubbub.

Some people say the Ladies Aid

Has never had his mate,
But all these thoughts would quickly fade
If to the store they were led by fate

May Cecil always have good luck
And never cease to shine,
May other people get up pluck
To come to see our town so fine.
