Will They Learn?

The condition of the fruit and vegetable canning industry during the past year furnishes a wonderful object lesson for the labor organizations when clamor for reduced cost of living but no reduction in their own pay rolls.

A year ago the fruit and vegetable producers were able to demand and secure the highest prices on record for many crops. In the northwest, as an illustration, the price of loganberries had been forced up from three cents to thirteen and a half cents a pound. The canneries bought large quantities of this high priced fruit and packed it. Unfortunately the public decided it would no longer pay such prices and as a result all canned products have suffered a disastrous year.

Again this season the growers got together and decided what prices they would accept but the decision was useless for the public who pays the bill, said no. As a result canners refused to buy. Forcing prices to the limit had killed the market.

The same situation exists in the building trades and other labor organizations. If they continue to try and maintain artificial standards of wages regardless of changed conditions they will find themselves in the same position as the fruit growers, they will have lots of labor to sell but no one will buy it.

Will they profit by the experience of others or will they learn their lesson in the dear school of experience where the law of supply and demand is no respecter of persons or unions?
 —The Manufacturer.

Starving Live Stock to Be Helped

The Oregon State Humane society is organizing a campaign to prevent the starving of millions of cattle and sheep on the ranges next winter.

Some of the biggest cattle and sheep men in the state like Hanley and Stanfield in eastern Oregon say winter starvation must stop.

The Humane society proposes to conduct an educational campaign in the cattle and sheep counties and get suitable legislation enacted.

The federal government and the banks are asked to put up millions to help save the live stock industry, and why let them starve?

Single counties are reported to have 100,000 tons surplus hay to carry over into next winter, and there is practically no market for it.

The power of the state and the federal government must be invoked to take the cattle and sheep to the hay or the hay to the sheep and cattle.

Letting herds and flocks perish on the ranges for lack of food and water and shelter robs the state of millions annually.

Where You Got That Awful Dream

Do you ever give any thought, Mr. and Mrs. Reader, to your subconscious mind? In other words, the other things your brain is working on without your conscious knowledge, while it is at the same time working on those things you know of, that you are fully alive to.

The scientists have developed a whole shelf of books on this subject during the last ten or fifteen years, mostly as a result of close observation of picked human individuals, great numbers of them. And these observations in all cases have been card-indexed as you would card-index a hundred thousand books in a public library. The result is that a great deal of interesting information has been obtained on sub-consciousness, much of it valuable to the medical man in his task of healing sick mankind.

There are few of us who have not experienced "night-terrors" sometime between babyhood and old age. Night terrors and nightmares are the action of the subconscious mind, and one of the writers, a Dr. Bowers, informs us that they date back thousands and thousands of years through our ancestors to the days of the "flying lizard" and other giant horrors that devastated early humanity.

Then there is the "gravity fall" as the scientists call it—the dream we all have had of falling great distances. It is a heritage of the age when our far distant forefathers lived in treetops to escape the dreadful animals that preyed upon them. They were always in danger of falling, and always in terror of it, and their danger has descended to us in the subconscious mind and only comes forth in dreams.

But when you slip into the pantry and devour the wife's last piece of lemon pie, you can't blame that on the sub-conscious mind!

Fair Skies Ahead

During the past year of financial slump and readjustment Oregon had but one bank failure. It was a Central Oregon institution. Eastern Oregon has had no trouble despite the fact the drop in farm prices virtually cut deposits in half and produced an unparalleled situation for the banks to meet. With the new crop now ready for harvest there is a fine outlook ahead. There will be a bumper crop and indications for a satisfactory wheat price are encouraging. Men who thought they would make no money on this year's crop are going to find that the big yield plus lower harvesting costs will bring them out on the right side of the ledger. It is a very gratifying state of affairs and all will be gainers. We may not have boom times ahead this fall and we do not want a boom but we are certainly to see brighter skies. It is time to cheer up and shave the whiskers from the face of Old Man Gloom.—East Oregonian.

Save For A Purpose

Saving money is worth while for it makes every day profitable to you.

But first of all have an object for saving,— set a goal for yourself. You have an ambition,—an education, a home of your own, capital to start in business or for investment.

Start saving with a definite goal. Your savings will grow when you have a plan. Then, too, as you go along, the compound interest earned on your money will help you reach your ambition in a shorter time.
