THE PUNISHMENT
By JANE JORDAN.

Copyright, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.

Coralie looked down into the street, a frown puckering her pretty brows. Bobby was due an hour ago and his present unreliable attitude troubled her. Not two months since Mr. Robert Hempstead, whom she met at her aunt's tea party, had been all promptness and eagerness. Now she realized, in humiliation, it was usually she who suggested their evenings together, and impatiently awaited his arrival.

Coralie was vastly proud of her lover's growing success. Sweetly submissive, apparently, to his profession's call. But there was more than all this in Bobbie's embarrassed evasions. Lily, the old colored woman who had been Coralie's nurse and was still a privileged adviser, came to pat her adorned one's hair.

"Honey," she comforted, "don't you go an' fret 'bout Mistah Hempstead. He's bound to come round all right, though he is kinda mixed up in his 'entions."

"That's all 'count of that playin' 'bout of his what everybody's crazy 'fret. Women, you see, honey, sort of turn that musical man's head, till he don't think much of any of 'em. I hear him an' Mistah Robert talking the evening you was out, an' the singin' man come over here after him, an' he says to Mistah Robert to go slow, that gettin' into marriage was easier than gettin' out; and marriage was mostly a mistake anyway to temperamental folks like them, an' Mistah Robert he seemed sorta uncertain, yet believin' like, as the two went away together."

"Reckon he ain't really done surrendered yet, Mis' Coralie, for all his lovin' of you."

"An' this yere mawkering 'round is hurtin' him more than it hurts you, honey, hmb."

Coralie went forward to meet the tall young man who came at last, confidently, through the doorway. This time there was no excuse.

"Coralie," Bob Hempstead said abruptly, "I'm going away. Just time to make my train. Signed up with the business office in Chicago for two months. Goodby, dear," the last words grudgingly.

"Why goodby, Bob," she answered Coralie, her tone was quite even.

"You see," he burst out, "I may as well be frank. I've been growing almighty fond of you lately—too fond; I'm not in a position to marry. So—Bob floundered hopelessly—"I thought I'd better go away."

When he had gone Coralie stood considering, then an odd little smile twisted her lips.

"So this is the influence of the 'playin' man'."

"Well, he will have to be punished," Coralie took down the telephone receiver.

"Punish," she asked sweetly of the masculine voice that answered, "may I speak to Mr. Raphael Vernon? This is Mr. Vernon? Coralie Richmond speaking. You may remember my name. Yes, a friend of Bobby Hempstead's. I would like very much to talk with you concerning this new business venture of Bobbie's. You see, I am much interested. Could you spare an hour to me this evening. I know Robert values your advice so highly. I, too, would like your opin-

lon. The twinkles deepened in Lily's black eyes as her nursing turned, dimpling, from the telephone.

"What dress you-all gonna wear for this evening, honey?" she asked. "Do one you looks mostest like an angel in is the plain white wid de big blue sash."

Robert Hempstead missed Coralie more than he had believed possible. Chicago, though a big and busy place, seemed strangely lacking in entertainment. Allowing from Raphael Vernon's caustic utterings, marriage appeared to be far from the undesirable thing he had made it. Bob began to figure industriously regarding lung-lows. As he plaintively hummed "The Love Nest," and wondered if Coralie's eyes would be as blue in reality as they had been in his dreams. Of her forgiveness because of his silence he was sure. Had Coralie not always awaited his coming? So Robert Hempstead took a trip back home.

Lily admitted him to the pretty apartment rooms which were Coralie's home. She was at the piano, Lily told him, practicing a new song.

Stood slipping in unannounced and Bobby pressed his fingers in boyish fashion over the girl's closed eyelids. "Guess who?" he joyously whispered. Coralie's loved laughter rippled forth.

"Why," she answered softly, "it's Raphael, of course."

"Raphael?" he sharply repeated the name as she turned to face him. Slowly but eloquently Coralie nodded.

"Raphael and I are engaged to be married, Bobby," she announced. "Lily the man sank into a chair. 'But Raphael scorned marriage,' Robert repeated dully, "said he did not believe in love."

"That," Miss Coralie happily informed him, "was because he knew nothing about it. Since then he has met me, and honestly changed his opinions. You did not lack opportunity for knowing better."

Robert Hempstead, going out the door, met the musician coming in, but his glance of bitter condemnation was lost upon the eager Raphael, whose own eyes were bent upon Coralie's smile of welcome.

Philippine Coal. Signs of industrial expansion in the Philippine islands are seen in the recent formation of a company which is developing the Cebu coal mines as well as those in Mindanao. It is expected that within a comparatively short time the output of these two islands will be sufficient to supply the needs of the whole archipelago as regards steam coal. The Mindanao product, which comes from what is known as the Sibuguey coal field, is asserted on the one hand to be superior to any other Philippine coal or to any coal imported into the islands, while on the other hand it is said to be liable to deterioration if used promptly.

British Ship Gets Record. The Empress of Britain, the first transatlantic oil-burning vessel to pass up the St. Lawrence, arrived recently at Quebec from Liverpool, in five days and twenty-two hours, breaking all previous records between those ports. It was her maiden trip as an oil-burner and she clipped six hours from her best previous time. The expense of reconditioning her as an oil-burner equaled the cost of her original construction.

PAINTED IN FIVE MINUTES
London Newspaper Tells of Merit of London Pictures Made Quickly by Traveling Artist.

While great painters have spent weeks—perhaps months—on a simple study, a young artist is turning out delightful views of the sea and country in five minutes, says London Answers. Impossible as this sounds, it is a fact, and the artist in question is Albert Cronshaw of Manchester.

It was an extremely dull day, with dark clouds overhead, when a crowd of holiday makers stopped to watch a smart looking man, mounted on a platform, transforming a plain piece of canvas into a marvelous scene of beauty. Every one forgot the dark, gloomy atmosphere as they were transported, first to a beautiful spot in North Wales, and then to a picturesque castle. And it was all done in 10 minutes.

They were pictures to be proud of, too, painted with taste and eye to the artistic. As fast as they were painted so were they sold to the admiring audience.

There is no doubt that there will be a great demand for "rapid" artists in the near future, when we get some of those promised houses built, and undoubtedly the economical household will be on the lookout for good, cheap pictures to beautify the walls of her domain. She need search no further than the traveling artist, who will complete a picture in five minutes and charge less for it than almost any art dealer.

Here, too, is an opportunity for any discharged soldiers who are artistically inclined. In a neat little hand book issued by the traveling painter they will find all the businesslike methods of working clearly and simply. It is a really useful short cut to rapid painting.

Probably Oldest Industry. The impending sale of Brandon Park, an estate of 2,000 acres on the Norfolk-Suffolk (Eng.) borders, recalls what is probably the oldest and most enduring industry in the world—flint working.

At Brandon the first flint working industry has been carried on for several thousand years. A small colony of workers is still making gun flints there and exporting them to savage tribes in Northern and Central Africa. It is said that these workmen are lineal descendants of the flint workers of the neolithic age.

Slowing Down Production. "How do you like the new hired man?"

"I like him first rate," replied Farmer Cortmossel. "But I've got my doubts about whether we can afford to keep him. He talks so interestingly about political economy and things that everybody wants to quit work an listen."

Jamaican Women Given Vote. Under a new law the women of Jamaica, British West Indies, are to have a vote in the elections for the parochial boards and the legislature. Every woman is entitled to vote if she is twenty-five years of age or more, can read and write and is of British nationality, but she must have also certain salary or property qualifications. The salary designated is $5 a year, or she must pay $10 in rent or $2 rates on house, lands or personal property.

An Obligation. "Do you intend to vote at the coming election?"

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "And I shall wear my handsome costume. Having secured the right to vote, every woman should feel it her patriotic duty to make it fashionable to do so."

Stage's Debt to Minstrelry. The stage is indebted to minstrelry for Joseph Jefferson, Stuart Robson, Edwin Adams, Edwin Booth, Tony Pastor, Bob Hart, Robert Downing, F. T. Barnum, Patrick Gilmore and Sousa. John Philip Sousa was a member of Simons and Sousa's minstrel troupe when Al G. Field was serving his apprenticeship with that company. Johnny Hyams of McIntyre and Hyams, was a minstrel with the Al G. Field company. Singer Colono of the Metropolitan Opera company was popular Will Collins when a tenor with the Al G. Field minstrels. George M. Coban, Willie Collier, Chauncey Ottcott, Eddie Foy, Francis Wilson, Frank Daniels, Jimmie Powers and Al Jolson all graduated from the minstrel stage.—New Orleans Item.

Bathing and Health. The Hebrews, Hindus and Mohammedans, as a part of their religion, are required to keep the body clean by frequent ablutions and baths and this has had a far-reaching effect upon the healthfulness of those people. When the Roman empire fell, the magnificent system of baths, which its people had and used for cleanliness of body, soon lapsed into decay. Only in Spain, under the Moors, was the system of bathing kept up. There, to conform to the religious rites of Islam, luxurious baths were maintained, but when the Moors were expelled the misguided plus people razed to the ground these remnants of heathenism.

As HE SIZED UP THE VISITOR
Hotel Clerk Was Pretty Sure That He Was Not Likely to Come In Very Early.

Cortlandt Bleeker said at a New York roof-garden supper: "A propos of New York as a summer resort, I heard a story the other day. A westerner blew in here and applied for a room in a hotel. The hotel clerk said to him: 'Very sorry, sir, but we're so overcrowded that I'll have to ask you to share a room with another gentleman. Will that do?'

"'Very sorry, sir, but we're so overcrowded that I'll have to ask you to share a room with another gentleman. Will that do?'

"'Im, yes. I suppose so,' said the westerner reluctantly, 'but will this chap turn in early? I've got a lot of work to do here in New York, and I'll need a lot of sleep, and I don't want to be disturbed by crinns.'

"The clerk laughed. 'You'll have your night's rest completed before this gentleman ever gets in,' he said.

"'Sure of that?' said the westerner. 'Certainly,' said the clerk. 'You see, the man's been stopping with us every August for the last eleven years, and this is the first time he's made the trip without his wife.'

In Denver they tell a story of a newly rich family that became discontented with the services of their old physician, despite the fact that for many years he had kept all of them in excellent health.

"So you have decided to get a new doctor," said a caller to the lady of the house, who had confided in her friend.

"I certainly have," said the other. "The idea of his prescribing fanned tea and mustard plasters for people as rich as we are!"

Famous Conservatory Gone. The celebrated horticultural conservatory on the dual estates at Chatsworth hall, near St. Albans, England, collapsed recently—as surely destroyed by the World war as any French or Belgian structure on the western front, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The glass house was erected in 1830-40, and served as a model for the great Crystal palace which was seen near London. It was itself of no mean size, measuring, as it did, 277 feet long, 125 feet wide and 67 feet high. Forty thousand panes of glass formed the arching walls and roof.

Ludicrously Low Prices. From a letter just received in New York from Prague, Czechoslovakia: "This city is one of the most beautiful places I ever saw. And the prices just now, if you have American money, are simply ludicrous. My room at the best hotel cost me 75 cents a day. You can dine at the best restaurants, with wine thrown in, for 50 to 75 cents. I just sent out a pair of shoes to be repaired by a cobbler, and what do you think the proffeer charged? Five cents! And you can go downstairs to the so-called American bar and get a champagne American for 25 cents and a Martini cocktail for 15 cents. Just got my week's bill from my hotel. Seven days' lodging and breakfasts—$6! and it's the best hotel in Prague!"

Dodge Brothers will announce on February 1st, 1922 A substantial reduction in the prices of their cars Effective from January 1, 1922 Cohn Auto Co.
