Official Records Disprove Statements Carried in New York World, Organ of Free Trade Democracy.

Washington, Jan. 18.—The free trade propagandists are tircless. Also they are truthless. An example of the glaring misrepresentation which Democratic and free trade mediums present in order to discredit the protective tariff is furnished by an article in the New York World of December 31 upon the subject of Canada's exports to the United States. In this article accurs the following:

"For the 12 months ending October 31, 1922, Canadian exports to the United States were to the value of $337,073,218. The decline undoubtedly showed the progressive effects of the restrictive United States tariff. On the other hand, for the same particles to the United States tariff. The new protective tariff went into effect September 22. According to the ruports of the United States Department of Commerce, Canadian exports to the United States for October, 1922, the first complete month under the present protective tariff, Canada exported to this country $1, 1921, totaled $25,015,476. In other words, during the first complete month under the present protective tariff, Canada exported to this country $1, 1923, and will be dated January 1, 1923, and will one January 1, 1923, and will wise they must bear the date they are actually issued and will draw infers from such issued at only.

As some fifty million dollars were due the citizens of this district on Savings Stamps they still held, much unscrupulous effort is being made the restrictive United States for October, 1922, the first complete month under the present protective tariff, Canada exported to this country therefore recommends and urges reinvestment of these funds through exchange of the Stamps for 4 per cent Treasury Savings Certificates up to the limit allowed, which is $5000 maturity value. tariff, Canada exported to this country $6,569,633 more goods than it did in October, 1921. This completely gives the lie to propaganda printed in the New York World to the effect that the tariff caused a decrease of Canada's exports to the United

There is no doubt that Canadian exports to the United Kingdom have substantially increased during the last year. This is not due to the protective tariff of the United States but to the tariff laws of the United Kingdom, which discriminate against goods from the United States in fa-ver of goods from Canada. This dis-crimination varies from 10 to 20 per cent in favor of Canadian goods incent in favor of Canadian goods, including all kinds of agricultural products. This discrimination in the tariff of the United Kingdom was made a part of Eugland's tariff laws effective October 1, 1921, almost a year before the American protective tariff went into effect. That Canada is selling more agricultural products in the United Kingdom proportionsafect money rates began their corresponding decline late in September. The end of the year found money rates firm and higher than in midsummer, though not high enough to affect business adversely or indeed to cause any apprehension. The credit resources of the country were in no wars strained by the increased volume and not to the American protective and not to the American protective and not to the American protective sany apprehension. The credit resources of the country were in no way strained by the increased volume of business during the year. While some demand was made on the Federal Reserve System by member banks for the financing of loans, rediscounts have nover assumed more than moderate proportions, and there is still ample credit in both the System and the Banks themselves for the requirements of business during the coming months.

Business prosperity for 1923 is of course contingent upon numerous factors, among which the clearing up of the foreign situation is most important. There is no doubt that the sound condition of the country's

In point of fact, the operation of the Fordney-McCumber tariff has awakened Canada to a realization that in the whole situation.

The Bond Market.

The future of the bond market is bound up in the future of general business and dependent upon it. But come what will, it is hardly likely that the bond record of 1922 will be duplicated, when a total of more than $4,000,000,000 of new corporation and foreign bonds was issued, of which the bond record of the character. The Canadian tartiff, enacted and operative over a year till, when the process a high tariff on American goods of the character. The Canadian tartiff, enacted and operative over a year before the Fordney-McCumber tariff became a law, imposes a high rate on iff, enacted and operative over a year before the Fordney-McCumber tariff became a law, imposes a high rate on imports of lumber and wood products rom the United States. Alarmed at the possibility of the United States retaliating, and knowing full well that such retaliation would be justiled, the Canadian government is now making overtures to this country to stablish reciprocal relations on tim-ber, lumber and wood products, the effect of which would be, not a change in our tariff laws, but the removal of Canada's tariff against such imports from the United States. from the United States.

In other words, so long as the United States had no protective tariff, Canada, in common with a great many other nations, felt free to ex-ployment, Federal Reserve figures show that 782 member banks on December 20, 1922, held $1,261,000,000 more investment securities than they reported on the corresponding date of 1921.

The January investment market is interesting. At the end of the year dividends and interest are disbursed and seek investment. At this time of year just after Christman, there is usually a seasonal luli in business. Canada, in common with other na-tions of the world, is beginning to take a different attitude toward the United States and hint at the desirability of establishing reciprocal re-
