CONDER WRITES A LETTER

Editor of the Gazette-Times:

Thinking my observations on a little business journey to the "wild and woolly East" might be of interest to you and your readers, I offer the following without prejudice but with the hope of showing those of our citizens, who, like myself, have not had the privilege and opportunity of traveling much in the last few years, that other sections of our great country have their problems and when compared to ours may make ours seem a little less burdensome.

Left Heppner, Oregon, March 9th on morning train and arrived in Benton, Illinois, about the same hour on the following Monday morning, March 13th, and in an hour thereafter was in the court room at the opening of the circuit court. Docket full, mostly criminal. Jail full, waiting for the wheel of justice to grind through. Town full of lawyers, all busy; papers full of accounts of criminal doings; banks full of money; bunkers full of coal (this is the heart of the greatest coal producing region in the world); stores full of goods, but no one buying anything; hotels and trains full of salesmen, but no one selling anything.

WAITING, WAITING, WAITING.

Waiting for what? I have asked this question while in conversation with a great many people during the last twelve days. A typical answer was given me by the president of a national bank, with resources according to the last report, of $1,175,799.31. This bank is in the city some miles distant from the county seat of Franklin county, Illinois. I had remarked to him, "I see you have plenty of money, why is everything at a standstill. Have we reached the bottom?" He knew this was no idle question on my part for I was asking in court for the resale of real estate in his town that had been appraised at a cash value of $15,000.00 in December, 1921, and the property had sold for $6,700.00 on February 25th, 1922. And he, like other bankers I had talked to, was very courteous and anxious to help me in any way getting at facts. His reply was to the effect that all coal mines are closing April 1st, pending readjustment of wages and no one knew what to do. Stores will not restock, people will not buy anything that they are not compelled to just now.

From one of the local papers printed daily in Benton I clipped: "ZEIGLER BREAKS WORLD COAL HOISTING RECORD."

"The new world's record established by this company is 7,214 tons in seven hours, fifty-seven minutes, running time. Only three minutes of lost time reported last Thursday. This mine holds the daily record and also the monthly world's record."

The banker went on to say that the price of nothing had been dropped materially except where sales had been forced by court action. Buildings begun in the city are being finished and others contemplated as soon as the "readjustment of wages is arranged."

There are no vacant houses, rather a scarcity of residences and business locations, but everything is uncertain.

READJUSTMENT OF WAGES.

Crime is at its height. In all trains and depots at Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, everywhere you go you can see the soldiers armed to protect the passengers and mails. They were on each sleeper where I occupied a berth. I have scarcely been out of sight of them.

Corn is ungathered in the fields in Colorado and Missouri, and I note from the window of the car much of it in great and small piles in the field. Upon inquiry I find that the prices offered for this corn last fall were so high that the farmer could not pay the wages asked and market the corn after it was grown. Yet we are paying 2 cents a pound for corn and barley to plow our wheat land and feed our sheep around Heppner.

PREACHER CLEANS UP CITY.

In the city of West Frankfort, Illinois, not far from here, they have elected the pastor of the First Christian church as mayor and a splendid group of aldermen to stand back of him. They have a mens class in that church of about two hundred members. The writer was asked to speak before the class last Sunday, and I can say that they were as fine a bunch as I ever spoke to. There were one hundred thirty-seven men present, who came through one of the worst storms I have ever seen even in south central Illinois. At the evening services I preached at the same church to one of the most intelligent mixed audiences of men and women, boys and girls, that I have ever stood before.

The night before, while I was sleeping peacefully in a room in the best hotel in the city, the pastor of the church who was also Mayor J. E. Story, with his police officers, three of the aldermen and some of the business men, raided a gambling joint within one-half a block of the hotel, known as the "Idle Hour Club," which was mighty well prepared against an attack. The gambling den was upstairs, with a cafe below. The windows were covered inside with heavy lining paper, and this, with 7-8 inch flooring shut out all possibility of getting in quickly from the outside. When the raid was made a couple of watchers were on the outside, a guard on the inside who had three doors to the cafe locked, but unlocked at the request of the police. At the back of the cafe was a locked door to the stairway, another locked door on the way up and another at the top of the landing. The guard failed to unlock the door so the policemen, with an axe and iron maul, made their way as quickly as possible to the den, but on the surface could see nothing but thugs, gamblers and law breakers. The pool tables, crap tables and card tables and other pieces of furniture were soon beaten into kindling wood, and after due extermination, in a hole in the wall was found dice, cards and gambling devices, also a gun which no one has claimed as yet.

This reads to me like a new story; the same old story perhaps in some respects, but this story of the pastor of the First Christian church whose name is Story, is certainly writing a new story on the police records of that city.

HORSE COMING BACK.

It would not be strictly proper to say the horse is coming back here for he has never gone from the middle west.

Early the first morning I was awakened by the tramp of shoes on the brick pavement, and constantly from early to late the horse is in sight, and they asked me often if there were not lots of horses raised in Oregon. At one time they shipped them here by the train loads to be distributed over south central Illinois.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

Will close this installment with the promise that should you be kind enough to cast this in the waste basket and not inflict it upon your readers I shall not be offended; but if you should put this in your most excellent paper I shall feel myself called upon to furnish you another installment out of my observations as I return over a more northerly route.

CLEAN UP YOUR TOWN

To the People of Heppner:

THIS IS your town. You live in it. It is just what you have made it. Other people will judge you by the way your town looks.

Are there tin cans, boxes, barrels, trash and rubbish scattered in your yard? Is your garden lot covered with weeds? Are your vacant lots clean? Are there loose boards or pickets in your fence? Is your gate knocked off its hinges? Do you have an old barbed wire fence? Do you have loose or missing boards in your walk, or do you have no walks at all? Repair and fix them up. Do you keep your coal bin or firewood in the street? Is your alley full of wood piles and manure? Clean them up. Were your trees ever trimmed or pruned? Is your old auto stored in the street?

Clean 'em Up

Clean up and fix up. This is your own home town. Don't wait for your neighbor. Don't wait for the marshal. Start something at home on your own property. NOW! TODAY! Your town is sick, you are the doctor.

Gather up your old trash and have it ready for the clean-up truck by the 10th of April
