Richard Lloyd Jones Says: KEEP STILL AND STUDY SILENCE.

BISMARCK'S enemies said of him in their despair, "He knows how to keep silence in seven different languages." It was his baffling territoriality that blunted the weapons that had forged against him.

Silence is perhaps the greatest art of conversation. Joseph Jefferson is credited with having discovered Weber and Fields, the comedians. After seeing them play in an obscure Bowery theater, he hurried to a theatrical manager, friend, saying: "They know how to listen."

A person often gains credit for sense, eloquence and wit, who merely says nothing and does it well. Silence indicates both courtesy and consideration. It gives the other fellow his turn. It pays him the compliment that his brain may also harbor some worthwhile ideas.

Every ideal relation savors of reciprocity. Every soul must have a medium and opportunity for self-expression. The one-sided conversation is always arrogant. Grant the other fellow a chance to say his say.

Silence indicates control. We often read: "He mastered himself and was silent." The trivial gabbler. When the mind is in control the machine is geared up tight. The wagging tongue always means loose tension. It is the loose gear that rattles. All nature pays homage to self-control.

Silence is the great healing power of solitude. In the face of a great crisis we are silent. In a great emotion we are still. Silence can be eloquent. It is always majestic.

"Silence is the lesson of kings," said Jean du Beaulieu at the funeral of Louis XV. And Carlyle has called silence the element of great things that fashion themselves together to rule.

Silence is more unimpeachable than speech because it cannot be attacked. Great thoughts are born in silence. It is the mother of truth. It is the secret vault of reason. It is the best help to him who mistrusts himself. "Let us be silent," says Emerson, "that we may hear the whisper of the gods."

Noise and tumult are the signs of war. Silence is the insignia of peace. It is quite as much a mark of strength to know how to hold your tongue as to know how to wisely use it.

THE BACKBONE OF AMERICA.

THERE is a home on the Oregon coast, facing the Pacific ocean. It is a small frame dwelling, plain and unpretentious. Back of it for miles stretches virgin forest.

And in the front yard is a tall flag pole. And on that flag pole for three days, the Stars and Stripes; the American Flag at half-mast.

Proclaiming to the world that here is a home in which there is love of country; patriotism; reverence for our president who died in the public service according as it was given him to see his duties.

Further back in the foothills of the Cascades, on a homestead in a clearing, there is a log house of a settler who, with his wife, and surrounded by their children, is hewing out of the forest a home.

And this humble homesteader has set up close to their cabin in the clearing a flag pole hewn from a stately young fir; and the flag in the foothills is at half mast.

President Coolidge, when he was officially notified, at Northampton, Mass., of his nomination as the candidate of his party for the office of Vice President, used the following words in closing his speech of acceptance, July 27, 1920:

"We have been taking counsel together concerning the welfare of America. We have spent much time discussing the affairs of government yet most of the great concerns of people around me hold no public office, expect to hold no public office. Still in solemn truth they are the government, they are America. We shall search in vain in legislative halls, executive mansions, and the chambers of the judiciary for the greatness of the government of our country. We

Poem by Uncle John

It's a mighty good idea to follow—when you're right on the brink of a verge, with bankruptcy holt of yer collar, the way to get out, is to "merge." With an abyss in front of yer dinner so horrible, rocky, and deep that the sight of it sweats yer liver, and turns ye as white as a sheep—when you think you are bound for the devil, in a wreck at the end of yer sponge, the way to get back on the level—is to hunt up somebody and merge!

It's the haven of refuge undoubted, for the snoozer that's down on his luck. . . . A merger has never been routed—your own veins in its pools like a duck. . . . The muntz the mungwog swallows the worm-eaten carcass you bring, you can see up in dignified places, and smoke cigarettes like a king!

So, when you are mighty nigh busted, and yer balance-sheet wends like a dirge—if you ever expect to be trusted, there's nothin' to do, but to Merge!

hark ye!

MR. COOLIDGE was visualizing the kind of home represented by the two mentioned above, where the Stars and Stripes are flying at half mast; humble homes, but filled with simple faith and love and respect and honor—homes representing the greatness of America. Her around the hearthstone, if thrift and industry are taught there, and the example of self sacrifice oft appears, if honor abides there, and high ideals, if there the building of fortune by subordinate to the building of character, America will live in security, rejoicing in an abundant prosperity and good government at home, and in peace, confidence and respect abroad. If these virtues be absent there is no power that can supply these blessings. Look well then to the hearthstone. Therein all hope for America lies.

So long as our government rests there, no power can shake it. "At night, returning, every labor sped, He sits him down, the monarch of a shed; Smiles by his cheerful fire, and round surveys His children's looks, that brighten at his bliss; While his loved partner, boastful of her board, Displays her cleanly platter on the board."—Goldsmith.

LOOKS like another "off year" in national politics. But the fellow who depends on the government shaping affairs to fit his individual needs, it'll always be found on its "off" list. What that old individual initiative do do things—and do them by the sweat of the brow. Get off the waiting list, stop trying the tongue method of procedure to accomplish those things that can only be attained by hard and constructive efforts. Dig in and dig out. That's required of any real man—and you don't find many real, successful men resting on a beach, whittling on a stick and playing tag with pedestrians and watching them dodge squirts of tobacco juice to the curb line. With everybody busy, there would be no time for a lot of oppressive propaganda now being dished out to the public.—Roseburg News Review.

ANOTHER FARM CANDIDATE. GEORGE MANSFIELD, wealthy Medford farmer, residing president of the state Farm Bureau, announces his candidacy for the democratic nomination for United States senate. Thus another professional friend of the farmer capitalizes his activities, and as a platform of platitude seeks public office and payroll as a means of alleviating agricultural ills.

Walter M. Pierce, who has been sweeping with farmers for decades, and most of the time in public office of some kind, is now governor, at $7,500 a year, with traveling expenses and the family on the payroll. C. E. Spence, who for many years has farmed the farmers, is state market master at $1,000 a year. Many other farmer friends are also saving the rancher by getting on the public payroll—so why not one who has made a science of it, like Mansfield?

Mr. Mansfield is a man of force and action, a vigorous speaker, an indefatigable campaigner, a good handshaker, a lawyer by training, a cattle-raiser by choice, and will be a formidable candidate. He talks progressivism and will probably make the same kind of a senator that Brookhart of Iowa is.—Salem Capital Journal.
