

Immense Livestock Enterprise Is Under Way

The Western Pacific Livestock company, Oregon corporation, operating in the state of Washington, is planning to stock the island of the Aleutians...

The directorate of this company is composed of prominent Oregon and Washington business and livestock men, who are headed by Andrew C. Smith of Portland.

In the opinion of leading livestock men, this concern is destined to become one of the greatest producers of wool and mutton in the world.

Donald H. Stevenson, of the U. S. Bureau Biological Survey, states that "Forage on Unalaska island renews itself so rapidly that there is no comparison between the forage land there and the western ranges."

According to Captain Mellick of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, the annual precipitation on the grazing area is about thirty inches, which is quite evenly distributed.

Peter L. Jensen, an experienced and successful sheepman of Tappan, Wash., accompanied by Mrs. Jensen, will reside permanently on the island. Mr. and Mrs. Jensen are heavy investors in the company.

G. M. Baskely, another director, who is a well known and successful sheepman, is making the trip to render any assistance that may be necessary to get this enterprise under way.

Contrary to the general opinion, the climatic conditions are moderate. The island lies seventeen hundred miles westerly from the mouth of the Columbia river...

Mosaic and Streak Bad Among Oregon Brambles

Mosaic and streak are two virus diseases of brambles wide spread in Oregon, most commonly found in loganberry plants.

In the eastern and middle western parts of the United States these diseases are destined to wipe out the cane fruit industry, according to one of the most prominent horticulturists of the country...

In Oregon mosaic is the more prevalent. Many loganberry plantings have been found where 90 per cent of the plants were infected and it kills out plants in from two to four years.
