LEXINGTON BEATS HEPPNER 14 TO 0

With Hardest Game Won, Wheat City Team Are Champions.

LEX TAKES BREAKS

Many Fumbles and Bad Kicks by Local Give Opponents Advantage; Scores Come Early in Game.

By outclassing and outplaying Heppner on their home field Saturday afternoon, Lexington stands without a rival as high school champions of Morrow, Gilliam and Sherman counties. Heppner, who was admitted to be the strongest contender for the honors, was unable to score against the Wheat City Saturday. The final score was 14-0.

Added to their better playing Lexington took the breaks of the game from the start, and with a safe lead the outcome was but a matter of how much Heppner could keep them from scoring and not how much Heppner could score. Lexington, however, after the game was played in Heppner territory, and only twice did Heppner get within scoring distance of the Lexington goal. The first time after progressing the ball to Lexington's 10 yard line, Heppner lost the ball on downs, and the second time she lost the ball on the failure of an attempted drop-kick from the 33 yard line.

Lexington kicked off to Heppner at the beginning of the play. Aiken for Heppner, fumbling the ball and recovering, giving Heppner first down on her own 25 yard line.

Attempts to make yardage, she was forced to kick, Aiken punting the ball out of bounds on the 38-yard line. From here Lexington started a terrific offensive which took the Heppner boys off their feet. Wright and McMullan, Lexington backs, smashed through Heppner's line for large gains, one after another, making first down in the first three plays. Then it looked for a minute like Heppner was going to stop the onslaught. McMullan was held for a 1-yard line, and Wright was penalized 15 yards for hurdling, making 16 yards to go in two downs. The next play Lexington was set back 3 yards more, but with only one down to make the 15 yards required to keep possession of the ball a completed forward pass netted them 20 yards and a touch-down. Lexington converted goal kick, making score 7-0.

Heppner advanced Lexington's second kick-off to the second half, after which Lexington started a terrific offensive which carried the ball to Heppner's 5-yard line in three first downs. The quarter ended with three attempts failed to put the ball across. The one remaining play for Lexington to keep possession of the ball and the first play of the second quarter, was all that was necessary for them to put it over the goal line. After kicking the ball fairly between the goal posts, the score stood, Lexington 14, Heppner 0. This ended the scoring for the game. The remainder of the second quarter was nip and tuck, though Heppner made three first downs to none for Lexington, and the half ended with Heppner in possession of the ball in the center of the field.

The one big thrill for the Heppner fans came in the second half, after Heppner had stopped a threatening Lexington march from the 38-yard line on the 5-yard line, when Con Adkins made a get-away for a 40-yard run. Adkins had a clear field ahead of him but because of an injured foot was unable to keep ahead of the Lexington tacklers. Heppner was then held for three downs and Lexington intercepted a pass, taking the ball on Heppner's 35-yard line. Lexington was then held for three downs and Heppner was penalized for off-side which gave their opponents first down again. On the second attempt to break through the Heppner line Lexington was penalized 15 yards for holding and was forced to kick. Heppner missed the kick and recovered the ball on the 25-yard line.

Here again the stands were brought to their feet, when June Devine, Lexington end, intercepted a pass in his own goal line and ran the full length of the field, apparently making a touch-down. The umpire's whistle had previously blown for an off-side play, however, and the ball was returned to Heppner's possession where the play had started on Lexington's 30-yard line. After making first down once, Heppner was held for three downs and in an attempt to score, a drop kick was tried. The kick went wild and Lexington took possession of the ball on her own 20-yard line. In the remaining five minutes of play it was again nip and tuck and the game ended with Lexington in possession of the ball in middle field.

Lexington's heavy and hard-hitting line was responsible for their victory, is the general opinion. They out-weighted the Heppner line several pounds to the man, and crushed them under their powerful onslaught. This put the Heppner backfield to a great disadvantage and apparently caused them to lose their grip on themselves. On three attempted punts, any one of which would have put the ball out of danger, Heppner kicked out of bounds with only a few yards gain. It is conceded that with the breaks of the game being equal Lexington would not have won by more than one score, and probably the game would have been scoreless.

Care of Farm Machinery Lures Oregon Farmers

The annual farmers' short course in farm mechanics at the Oregon Agricultural college covering selection, care, repair and adjustment of farm tractors, trucks, automobiles, and other mechanical equipment and farm buildings will open January 2 for 11 weeks, and the special short course will open February 18 for one week.

This course is particularly adapted to the young man on the farm, giving him a chance to enjoy the fellowship, social and athletic activities and chances for advancement with the college student.

The large swimming pool will be open to students, and a short course basketball team may be organized again this year.

The one week special will be given again this year to those who cannot afford the time required for the 11 weeks course. Special attention is given problems in agricultural engineering.

Applications must be sent in early and only a Morrow county wheatgrower, and this went to Tom Boyen, Jr., of Butter creek, who received 10th on Turkey Red in the division of hard winter wheats. Out of a field of 150 entries in this class, Mr. Boyen did well, but the disappointing feature of the whole grain exhibit was the fact that but little of the grain sent to the exposition from this county was on display.

County Agent Morse, who attended the show, was much disappointed to find that but very few samples had even been tagged and placed in the competition. The entries had been made on the books and a number given the exhibits there and this was all; they were lost in the shie and were not on display at all, hence could not be judged. Mr. Morse is very sure that had the grain exhibits been placed in the classes where they should have gone, Morrow county would have carried off much prize money. On the other hand it was also learned that several fine samples of grain that had been left with the warehouses were neglected and not prepared according to instructions and never shipped. The samples sent in, however, were prepared and shipped according to the instructions sent out from headquarters and reached the entry books as stated here. Just where the fault lies, Mr. Morse will not attempt to say, but there is some excuse in the fact that the land products show took over the Northwest Grain show from Pendleton at a late date and they were not fully organized to handle so big a proposition as it proved to be. This will not happen another year, Mr. Morse was assured.

Morrow County Exhibits Were Not Put On Display

Reports from the recent land products show in Portland made but one award to Morrow county wheatgrowers, and this went to Tom Boyen, Jr., of Butter creek, who received 10th on Turkey Red in the division of hard winter wheats. WOOL GROWERS FIGHT INCREASE Proposed Raise of Fees For Forest Grazing Lands Meets With Disfavor.

(Pendleton East Oregonian)

That sheep men of Oregon will oppose the proposed increase of fees on the national forests for grazing is foreshadowed in a letter that has been sent out by F. W. Falconer, president of the Oregon Wool Growers' association, to members of the association in which he asks for the opinion of the individual growers. It is probable that the question of the wool growers' stand on this question will be decided through the association, though the forest officials have suggested that the problem be taken up with various small groups.

The letter in full is as follows: "Perhaps you are aware that conferences have already been held in Idaho and Utah by representatives of the forest service and representatives of the livestock interests; that these meetings have been held for the purpose of considering the proposed grazing fees for use of the national forests of the United States; and that it has been intimated that these fees will be increased from 200 to 300 per cent, beginning with 1925.

"At the meetings at Salt Lake City and at Pocatello, Idaho, the stockmen went on record as emphatically opposed to the raising of the grazing fees and any change in the present manner of handling the grazing areas in the national forests.

"E. N. Kavanagh, district forester, of Portland, Oregon, who is in charge of grazing, wrote us that the forest department would like to take this matter up with the various small livestock organizations in Oregon and Washington. It is the opinion, however, of the major portion of the executive committee of the Oregon Wool Growers' association that it would be to the best interests of the sheepmen of Oregon to hold a conference with the forest under the auspices of the Oregon Wool Growers' association.

"It is unnecessary to tell you that the raising of the grazing fees in the national forest would do untold damage to the livestock industry of the Pacific northwest, and that a raise of 200 to 300 per cent, as has been proposed would actually be a prohibitive price to the users of these grazing areas. It is imperative that we put up a united fight against this proposal and that we go about it intelligently after giving the proposition due thought. If we do not assume a united stand against this measure our industry will be in danger of annihilation.

"When in doubt do not send the child to school. All questionable cases should be referred to the health officer. The best investment a country can make is a full time health unit which will insure the proper investigation of all suspicious cases. Parents and teachers can do much to lessen infection if they will observe and follow a few simple rules.

A child should not be sent to school, or should be excluded from school, who has an acute cold.

Who has a fever.

Who is broken out with a rash.

Who has a sputum raising cough.

Who has a swelling of the neck or face.

Who cannot eat on account of illness.

Who is nauseated, dizzy, or faint.

Who has red or weeping eyes.

Who lives in a home that is quarantined.

A wise parent will make certain that a child that has recently had an acute attack of contagious disease will not return to school until such contagion has fully cleared. To send a child to school when not fully recovered, not only may be a great wrong to other children, who may be infected and seriously injured by contact with such a case.

Let parents and teachers cooperate in making our schools not only institutions of learning, but diffusers of health instead of spreaders of disease.
