THE amount spent by Britain in I liquor during the year 1923, was $1,537,500,000. This is $2,500,000 more than the interest on the national debt, considerably more than the gross annual assessable value of lands, houses, and other property; almost twice as much as the capital invested in the coal industry; more than twice the amount of taxes collected in 1922-23; nearly three times the estimated expenditure on Imper-ial defense; nearly four times the amount spent on education; and more than six times the sum spent on the relief of the poor. Taking the consumption of beer alone, the Englishman's fondness for his heer is amply demonstrated by the fact that the nation drank 30. 000,000 more gallons of the product of the brewery than it did the milk of the cow, while the value of the beer consumed exceeded that of milk is to compound itself each man and
