AS THROUGH A GLASS DARKLY.

TEN years ago—on June 28, 1914—a mad Serbian student sent a bullet into the heart of the heir to the Austrian throne and a world flamed into war. The perspective of time has already shown us that the resulting conflict was inevitable—that the chance accuracy of Princep's aim served only to speed the turn of the wheel of fate that was foredooming millions of men to death. Yet for a time—for nearly a month, in fact—after the Serajevo assassination only the farseeing among men probably read in the event a portent of the world convulsion that was to follow. Look back at the newspaper files for July, 1914, and forgetting, if you can, what the next decade brought, see if from a perusal of the front pages of that early summer you could have foretold the headlines that would be emblazoned there the first week in August.

Men are poor judges of their own times; it is no more difficult to foretell the future than it is properly to weigh the significance of the present. What soldier who fought at Hastings guessed that in the defeat and death of Harold and the triumph of William the Conquerer the English nation had had its birth? What embattled farmer firing from behind a stone wall on the Concord-Lexington road could see in the dust clouds raised by the heels of the fleeing redcoats the vision of a great republic stretching from ocean to ocean, peopled by a hundred million liberty-loving descendants?

War is merely the first spark of the sputtering fuse of an epoch in history. The flash from the pistol of the assassin at Serajevo lighted the bomb that extinguished the ancient Romanoff dynasty of Russia and the Hohenzollern's power over Germany. And the fuse is still sputtering, firing in its course great stores of governmental explosives. In both France and England it has touched off national fireworks—Roman candles and skyrockets blazing forth erratically to herald the fall of ministries and presidents and premiers. To the eyes of America, turned watchfully toward her shores, Europe still appears one vast pyrotechnic display. And, we must admit, we have our own flares and firecrackers—all a part of the train of combustibles which has been burning ever since the first flash at Serajevo.

History, of course, is not a perpetual red fire parade, so mankind hopefully expects that order and peace will soon come again. The advantages of that peace and order will be strongest for the nation that first anticipates them. And they may come sooner than we now dare hope. What doughboy, flung on his belly in an Argonne thicket in the tooth-and-nail fighting of late October, 1918, would have dared hazard the incredible guess that the war would be over in two weeks?—American Legion Weekly.

Those already here are Mrs. Guy Boyd and three children, and a niece, Mrs. C. H. Brown of Parma, Idaho, Mr. and Mrs. Chas H. Campbell returned Friday evening from Summerville, Union county, where they were called to attend the funeral on Thursday of Matt Sanderson, a brother-in-law of Mrs. Campbell and prominent resident of Union county for many years. Death came to Mr. Sanderson as a result of paralysis he suffered some two or three weeks previous. He was 72 years of age, and is survived by his widow and several grown children.

Farm Activities

FROM THE "MORROW COUNTY FARM BUREAU NEWS"

Wheat Growers Conference to Be Held at St. Paul.

The McNary-Haugen bill failed to pass the session of Congress just adjourned, but according to statements made by George C. Jewett, chairman of the McNary-Haugen Legislative committee, the campaign to have the bill passed improving the general purposes of the McNary-Haugen bill will not be dropped. A letter received by the Morrow County Farm Bureau from Mr. Jewett is as follows:

"To Farmers and Farm Organizations:

"You are hereby invited to attend and participate in a National Organization Conference to be held at St. Paul at the Garrick theater, beginning 10 a. m. on July 11 and 12, 1924.

"This conference has been called in accordance with the desires expressed at Washington, D. C., by national farm organizations, for the purpose of forming a temporary organization to have charge of a national campaign to secure the enactment into law of the basic principles of the McNary-Haugen bill.

"This is a matter of extreme importance, and you are most cordially urged to be represented at this conference."

Potato Bugs.

Potato bugs are causing considerable damage in potato patches thruout Morrow county at the present time. The following control methods are effective and are recommended: The Colorado Potato Beetle, or Striped Potato Bug is easily poisoned by spraying or sprinkling with lead arsenate mixed at the rate of four lbs. to one hundred gallons of water. This can be sprayed on the vines with a small spray pump or by sprinkling with the ordinary sprinkling can. Another method, easier to handle for small patches is to thoroughly mix powdered lead arsenate and air-slacked lime at the rate of one part by weight of lead arsenate to nine parts of air-slacked lime. Put this in a sack and dust it over the vines by shaking the sack. It is much easier to get them when they first come out and are only a few bugs on the vine tha nto wait until eggs laid by the bugs are hatched out and the slugs appear.

Harvest Labor Service to Be Given.

Arrangements have been made by the County Agent to supply harvest labor when needed. Mr. H. J. Biddle of Ione, and Mr. Tucker of Lexington are cooperating with the County Agent's office to secure harvest hands. Farmers living tributary to these towns are requested to call on them for help and if they cannot be secured at the towns they wil call the County Agent at Heppner who will have the men shipped in from points outside the county. Wherever possible, an effort will be made to secure local men to handle work and only in those cases where local men cannot be secured will the outside labor be imported. Men looking for work in the county should be directed to Mr. Biddle or Mr. Tucker or to the County Agent's office at Heppner where they will be placed if possible.

Wool Market Reports Are Brodcasted by Radio.

A recent letter from Mr. R. A. Ward, general manager of the Pacific Cooperative Wool Growers association of Portland announces that his organization will, on each Thursday evening about 7:35, broadcast from KGW, the Morning Oregonian station, a special wire on the wool market, received from the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Agricultural Economics. Tuning in on this station at that time will give wool growers the latest information on the Boston wool market before it can be secured here through the usual newspaper channels. Mr. Ward further stated that he had recently returned from an extended visit in the mill districts in New England and found the wool manufacturing industry to be in rather poor condition, particularly with reference to the worsted branch of the industry, and various estimates place the activity of worsted spindlers at somewhere between 50 and 60 per cent. The more conservative elements of the trade estimate it to be nearer 40 per cent to 60 per cent. Foreign markets for wool keep on a high basis and there is now a margin of 30c to 35c per pound between fine staple Australian wool out of bond duty paid and the nearest corresponding grade of territory fine staple.

Wheat Inspection for Certified Seed.

Three days of the past week were spent by the County Agent and Mr. E. R. Jackman, extension farm crop specialist, inspecting wheat fields for seed certification in the county. All of the requests for inspection were not covered and another day or two will be spent, starting July 7, to finish up the work in the county. Any farmer having wheat which he wishes inspected for certification is requested to notify the County Agent not later than July 5.

In the inspection work the past week a number of excellent fields were located and detailed data will be published on the fields passed for certification as soon as the work is completed. Among the fields which looked especially good at this time were 480 acres of Turkey Red grown by Fred Raymond of Rhea Creek, 300 acres of Forty-fold grown by Leonard Carlson of Ione, 160 acres of Turkey Red grown by W. L. Copenhaver of Lexington, and 140 acres of Turkey Red grown by Frank Mason of Lexington. A number of other fields inspected will pass certification requirements and be o.k.'d for seeding. A large number of fields thruout the county have some rye in them which puts them out of class A certified seed class. Most of the rye found is volunteer between the rows probably spread by feeding rye hay when working summer fallow or seeding.

Certification requirements are as follows: Class A certified seed, a tolerance of one-half of one per cent mixture of wheats of different color or texture with a total tolerance of one per cent mixture of other varieties. No rye mixture is tolerated in Class A seed. For Class B certified seed a total tolerance of two per cent mixture of other varieties and a trace of rye is admissable.
