MORROW COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER Foreign Advertising Representatives THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

WE ARE LEARNING. IN SPITE of money being tighter in our county this year than for some years past, Heppner's chauntique was just as much as ever before.

I wonder if we recall the resolutions we made in January, 1924? It seems this last year, more than ever, that promises with some people are like pie crusts—easily broken.

Step into your bank today and find out their daily clearances. Step into the postoffice or express company and find out how much money is being sent out of town.

We cannot invest too much in our boys and girls, for they are the future leaders in our commonwealth. At the same time we must needs look to our own improvement that we may lead the greatest amount of service to our fellow men.

This one window proposition also has much to do with the way our boys and girls are reared, and if for no other reason, we should broaden our vision to greater than the common generation may thus have its chance of progress enhanced.

It is messages that such men as Drs. Hagerman, Taylor and Hulbert bring to Chauntique that keeps the chauntique coming to the community. Of course the high class musical and dramatic talent, such as was heard in the big tent this year, help to a great extent, but if it were not for this educational feature, the chauntique could never succeed.

Since writing the above, it is learned a final shocking of the receipts revealed a slight deficit. However, it amounts to very little when the great amount of joy the big tent brought is considered.

IS IT WORTH WHILE? It looked mighty good to see the large crowd of fans at the base ball game on the Fourth. This was the first real crowd in attendance at a ball game this year.

To start with, when Heppner got a four-run lead in the first inning, local fans were enthusiastic to the point of hilarity.

CAN HEPPNER BUSINESS MEN IMPROVE TRADE CONDITIONS WITH NEW METHODS

READ WHAT MR. T. K. KELLY, THE NATIONAL AUTHORITY ON ADVERTISING AND SELLING SAYS ABOUT IT.

At the request of the Gazette-Times Mr. T. K. Kelly, nationally recognized as an authority on advertising and selling, prepared the following suggestions to the business men of Heppner.

I wonder if we recall the resolutions we made in January, 1924? It seems this last year, more than ever, that promises with some people are like pie crusts—easily broken.

Step into your bank today and find out their daily clearances. Step into the postoffice or express company and find out how much money is being sent out of town.

We cannot invest too much in our boys and girls, for they are the future leaders in our commonwealth. At the same time we must needs look to our own improvement that we may lead the greatest amount of service to our fellow men.

This one window proposition also has much to do with the way our boys and girls are reared, and if for no other reason, we should broaden our vision to greater than the common generation may thus have its chance of progress enhanced.

It is messages that such men as Drs. Hagerman, Taylor and Hulbert bring to Chauntique that keeps the chauntique coming to the community. Of course the high class musical and dramatic talent, such as was heard in the big tent this year, help to a great extent, but if it were not for this educational feature, the chauntique could never succeed.

Since writing the above, it is learned a final shocking of the receipts revealed a slight deficit. However, it amounts to very little when the great amount of joy the big tent brought is considered.

made up of kindly, genial men and women, who will be glad to have a visit from a merchant or a merchant's representative introducing his merchandise.

There is hardly a merchant in business today who has not got an automobile, and he certainly can afford to spend some time each week out in the country with two of his clerks, supplying merchandise to the people in the outlying districts.

Just as soon as a merchant starts to figure that his expenses are just as high, and go on just as steadily during the dull days as during the busy days, then he is going to get busy and inject some ideas into his business that will make dull business a thing of the past.

What is to prevent a store employing say four clerks from sending two or three clerks out to visit families in their immediate district, putting in full working hours, doing this Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays?

The retailer in having his clerks call upon the people at their homes will have a better entree than the unknown solicitor who is calling at these homes selling merchandise.

People in a merchant's district don't know what kind of firms these unknown solicitors represent—they don't know whether they are reputable or not, but they do know the local merchant, his store and his stock.

Every clerk employed should be thoroughly sold on his job—he should have faith in his employer, in the stock, the store, the values given to such an extent that he would be glad and willing to go out and tell his neighbors about it.

As a matter of fact, if you look at the situation right square in the face it simmers down to the point that the trade in Podunk is about the same as the trade in New York City.

Whether your trade is made up of city folks, or of farmers, it doesn't make any difference. Good merchandise offered at attractive prices will be a business getter—particularly when that merchandise is demonstrated to them right in their own homes, where there will be nothing much to distract their attention.

Corrected—Attest: EMMETT COCHRAN, J. W. BEYMER, J. G. THOMPSON, Directors.
