

Two Republican Candidates Talk Over The Political Situation At Meeting At Coolidge Homestead

The broad smiles on the faces of President Coolidge and Vice-Presidential Candidate Charles G. Dawes, were caught by the camera when General Dawes visited Mr. Coolidge recently at his father's home in Plymouth, Vermont.

General Dawes had returned from a visit to Maine and from appearances he had just told his running mate the happy forecast—a forecast that was realized on election day when the Maine Republican ticket swept the field, receiving the heaviest vote cast in the history of the state.

Almost immediately following the visit General Dawes proceeded to Lincoln, Nebraska, the home state of his vice-presidential rival and delivered his now famous straight from the shoulder talk to the American farmers. He concluded by telling them that through scientific study and conscientious effort the Republican party would do the ablest it could to solve the American agricultural problem. His last words in the speech were "Whoever promises more than this is entering into a contract that cannot be filled."

President Coolidge rested by his two weeks in his boyhood home, returned to the White House to greet a delegation of prominent labor men. They assured him that his labor record throughout his public life was such that he merited and would receive the staunch support of every producer.

PLAYING GAME OF DIRTY POLITICS

by George G. Brown, clerk of the state land board, bearing the date of September 23, a total of 79 borrowers from the state school funds are listed as being technically in arrears on payments on their loans. Their delinquency, like that in the 526 similar cases cited by the Governor and the Oregon Journal as evidence of waste and negligence threatening heavy losses to the state, consists of the fact that they had not complied in the letter of the board's ruling that interest on loans be paid semi-annually.

Setting their rules and regulations above the terms of the law under which they operate the present majority on the land board declares those borrowers who do not pay promptly every six months to be delinquent, and their loans questionable risks. The law specifies that loans are not to be classed as delinquent until payments are in arrears at least one year, and to safeguard borrowers who have been temporarily embarrassed by the agricultural depression since the war the legislature in 1921 provided that the land board, at its discretion, might extend the period for the inception of delinquency to three years.

It is noticeable that in their attacks upon the "bad loans", as they classify most of the other 526 six-month delinquents, nothing is said by the Governor and the Oregon Journal of these 79 loans, all of which have been made since Governor Pierce became a member of the board.

In the list which the Governor and the Journal have been advertising as delinquents practically all are loans of several years standing upon which interest and principal payments had been made up to the time of post-war agricultural depression set in. The 79 loans which now appear as delinquent by their own definition of delinquency have all been made since January 1, 1923, and 45 of them have been made on applications filed since January 1 of this year.

If the Governor's fears that the 526 loans listed on his reports are potential losses to the state school funds, then by the same measure the school funds stand to be depleted by another $120,575 on these loans that bear the approval of Governor Pierce, and in several instances that of State Treasurer Myers.

In riding out north of Lexington on Sunday afternoon, we noted that a lot of fall seeding had been done, but owing to the dry weather the seed is not germinating. Perhaps this is much better than if it had, in other parts of the county where the grain is up, reports reach this paper that the grain is beginning to die and reseeding will be necessary if the

31	Cases as to which definite amount is not available, but which would amount to many millions; damage listed at	0
34	Cases still under investigation; would amount to many millions; damage listed as	0
21	Cases in which reported removal or investment elsewhere was stated to have been caused by the income tax, but which cannot be verified in writing; damage listed as	0
	Total recorded damage	$41,253,350

We have examined the signed statements and exhibits upon which the foregoing tabulation is based and find that the total of $41,253,350 is a conservative estimate of damage properly attributable to the state income tax as a determining factor in influencing decision against Oregon investment in the cases listed. We also find that many additional amounts could have been included justifiably in the total, so that, making every allowance for possible overstatements in individual items listed, the actual loss of investment attributable to the state income tax is materially in excess of $40,000,000.

Wife: That's no excuse; you never dance on your own feet anyhow."

Whoa, Napoleon.
Amateur Detective: "I'm going out to capture those train robbers."
Friend: "What! With that little dog? You can't catch train robbers with a poodle."
A. D.: "Sh-h-h—not so loud—he thinks he is a Great Dane."

Both Are Right.
